PROF. MOLEY QUILTS EFFECTIVE SEPT. 7 TO EDIT MAGAZINE FOR VINCENT ASTOR

President Roosevelt, in Accepting Resignation as Assistant Secretary of State, Commends "Service to Country."

HULL SAYS HE DID NOT SUGGEST CHANGE

Secretary of State and His "Brain Trust" Subordinate, However, Have Differed on Major Policies, Particularly at London.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Prof. Raymond Moley, one of the principal members of President Roosevelt's "brain trust," who left his chair at Columbia University to be one of the Roosevelt advisers during the presidential campaign and was made Assistant Secretary of State after the election, has resigned from the State Department, with whom Moley has been at odds, particularly over policy at the recent world economic conference in London, says Moley's resignation was not at his suggestion. Moley's resignation is regarded here nevertheless as a distinct victory for Secretary Hull.

The Hull-Moley differences began when Hull became an exponent of internationalism and low tariffs as against Moley's nationalism. Soon after Hull's return from London, Moley was assigned to special work in the Justice Department and it was rumored that Moley soon would leave the State Department. During his half year in the State Department, Moley has been a constant adviser of the President and is credited with a first-hand part in shaping major recovery legislation of the last session, including the farm relief act, the Muscle Shoals law and the Federal securities regulation bill.

Statement by Hull.

From his vacation retreat in Virginia Secretary Hull sent word that he "had no information beyond that Prof. Moley contemplated resigning." He further said in his formal statement: "I may add that I can accurately say, in this connection, that I have not at any time offered the slightest suggestion to the President or Mr. Moley relative to any present or future change in the official status of the latter as Assistant Secretary of State."

"I wish Prof. Moley every success in his new field and will at all times gladly co-operate with him in every feasible way, both in the past and all possible joint efforts in support of the President."

Moley's resignation, effective Sept. 7, was announced yesterday after a long conference between Moley and the President at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Moley said he would be the editor of a new national weekly to be published by Vincent Astor, friend and distant relative of President Roosevelt.

"I need not tell you," said Moley in his letter accepting Moley's resignation, "that I appreciate and will always remember your participation during these two years in the development of policies based on our common ideals. You have rendered a very definite service to your country, and your departure from an official position to undertake an editorship will give me an opportunity to carry on the work in an equally wide field."

Of the new Astor-Moley weekly, Moley, who was also at the summer White House yesterday, said: "As we see it, there is now, as never before, a wide and fertile field for a free, impartial and vivid interpretation each week of the momentous changes taking place in our American life. There also is the need of a vehicle for the expression of those ideas and opinions that will tend to direct the forces along planned and progressive channels. To supply such a medium, dedicated to truly American ideals, we shall do our utmost."

Letters Made Public.

The resignation was made public by Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President. The exchange of correspondence between Moley and the President and a statement by Vincent Astor follows: "Dear Mr. President: For months I have given long

KANSAS BANKER ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLING $79,061

Father of Man Who Is Charged With Uttering Forged Bonds.

By the Associated Press.

EMPORIA, Kan., Aug. 28.—W. W. Finney, president of the Fidelity State and Savings Bank, here is charged with the embezzlement of $79,061 in a warrant issued today by Clarence V. Beck, County Attorney. Finney is the father of Ronald Finney, charged with uttering forged bonds.

Finney's bank here has been closed since Aug. 8, when his son was arrested. The elder Finney was released on $25,000 bond.

Eighteen counts allege the banker embezzled money from the bank through personal checks or checks drawn on the various telephone companies with which he is connected. Removal of cash from the bank is also charged.

The items enumerated in the warrant range from $10,000 to $2. The alleged transactions cover a period from December, 1932, to August 10, two days after the arrest of Ronald Finney.

ANTI-TRUST LAW IS SUSPENDED IN NEW YORK STATE TO AID NRA

Governor Signs Bill Permitting Full Operation of Firms Under Trade Agreements.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 28.—New York State suspended its anti-trust law today to permit full operation of the National Recovery Act within the State's borders. Gov. Lehman signed a bill passed by the Legislature which suspends the law for the duration of the national act.

Under the bill which the Governor signed, any code of competition or trade agreement approved by President Roosevelt becomes New York State law for the duration of the National Recovery Act.

The suspension of the State anti-trust law will permit the formation of codes of competition and trade agreements which heretofore were violations of the State act. This law was passed to supplement the Federal Sherman anti-trust laws.

Another bill, signed today, permits New York State to lend the Federal Government the services of any State employee to aid in administering the NRA program.

TIMOTHY J. CROWE, CONVICTED OF GRAFT IN CHICAGO, DIES

Former President of Sanitary District Had Appeared From Prison Sentence.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Timothy J. Crowe, widely known politician and former president of the sanitary district, died today at his summer home at William Bay, Wis. Crowe had appealed a one to five year prison sentence as result of the alleged graft connected with the so-called "Whoopee Era" of the sanitary district.

A heart attack was given as the immediate cause of death. Crowe had been suffering from diabetes for some time.

Storm Damages Papal Villa. ROME, Aug. 28.—A sudden rain and hail storm caused considerable damage at the papal villa at Castel Gandolfo, near Rome, today. A 60-foot section of wall was damaged by a flood which undermined the foundation. Two hundred fowl were drowned when the barnyard was flooded.

The noisiest chorus of grunts and squeals ever heard in the National Stockyards saluted the dawn today as an estimated total of 50,000 hogs from five states gave voice to raucous protest from pen and motor truck where they awaited sale to the Government under the Farm Administration plan for bolstering the pork market.

So overwhelming was the response of the raisers to the Government's offer to buy 5,000,000 hogs at premium prices that the official local committee of packers, commission men and Government officials declared a moratorium this afternoon on pigs of all weights until Thursday morning.

Sows will continue to be accepted by the government, but even when the premium pig market reopens Thursday no pigs will be purchased unless their owners have shipping permits, obtained through their commission men and authorized first by the local committee.

Plan to Handle 15,000 a Day. Daily shipments will be limited to 150-head to an individual. The committee is trying to hold down the run at the East Side yards to about 15,000 hogs a day. No permits for Thursday's market will be issued until after a committee meeting Wednesday morning, and then they will be distributed on an equitable basis.

Any pigs arriving at the yards before Thursday for Government purchases will be handled "at shipper's risk" and thrown on the open market.

While the flood of hogs precluded the possibility of processing the huge stock on hand for several days, the scarcity of sows in the shipments was a huge disappointment. Intent on reducing the production of pork the Government had hoped to be able to slaughter at least one sow to every four pigs.

In the 50,000 hogs in the East Side market, however, it was estimated there were less than 400 sows.

Waiting on Other Fellow. The glutted market began to manifest itself Saturday night when raisers from Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Indiana began arriving with their squealing charges, which came in by motor truck and railroad car.

The porkers ranged in size from huge and ponderous 300-pounders to tiny little fellows destined for "tankage"—conversion to fertilizer—a fate assigned to pigs weighing between 20 and 80 pounds.

Veterans of the stockyards noted early in the course of the influx that sows were conspicuous by their absence. The Government had offered a premium of $4 a head above its own market for females of 275 pounds and over, but apparently the raisers decided to let the other fellow turn in his sows.

Also it was noted that many of the porkers were under the minimum limit of 25 pounds. Those that fell below the limit will be turned back to the raisers, to live to see another slaughter day, but the raiser's return with them to his farm will be complicated by the requirement that the pigs must be vaccinated against cholera before they can leave the stockyards.

While the stockyards force works day and night on the processing of the present shipment, the committee in charge will be preparing plans for controlling shipments, both as to numbers and proportion of sows.

Governments' Price Scale. The prices for pigs taken to the East Side market, under the Government scale, range from $9.40 a hundred pounds for 25-pounders, to $9.90 per hundred for 100-pounders and 100 pounds or about 250 per cent more than the normal market quotations. The $4-a-head premium for sows is applicable only to animals which are about to farrow, since the Government plan is aimed primarily at a permanent reduction in the production of pork.

The normal run of hogs at the East Side market is only about 10,000 head, so that the yard was taxed to about five times its usual volume of handling. In spite of that, however, the crews in the yard went about their tasks without confusion and new shipments were swiftly handled between truck and pen.

Fertilizer made in "tankage" the porkers between 25 and 80 pounds will be distributed by the Government. The porkers between 80 and 100 pounds will be slaughtered and the meat, after processing, will be distributed to the needy through charitable agencies.

STUNTING FLYER HITS AUTO

By the Associated Press.

NRA PLEDGE CARDS AUTO CODE SIGNED BEING DELIVERED TO HOMES TODAY WITH EMPLOYERS' CLAUSE ON LABOR

Housewives Asked to Sign Agreement to Patronize Firms That Display Blue Eagle Insignia.

CANVASS TO BE MADE BY WOMEN

Consumers to Return Window Signs If They Do Not Wish to Put Names on Agreement.

Distribution of consumer co-operation agreements to the estimated 215,000 homes in St. Louis today by postmen and the St. Louis Committee of the National Recovery Administration started its campaign to encourage signing of the agreements. They pledge the consumer to patronize businesses displaying the Blue Eagle insignia, indicating the employer is complying with the President's voluntary blanket re-employment agreement.

The greater part of the work in this phase of the recovery campaign is being undertaken by the 2000 members of the Women's Division of the St. Louis Committee, headed by Mrs. Nat S. Brown.

Housewives will be asked to sign the pledge card by woman workers, at least two of whom will be assigned to make a house-to-house canvass in each of the city's 670 voting precincts. More than 400 others will be stationed in lobbies of hotels, theaters and office buildings, in large stores, Union Station and the bridge terminals to obtain signatures. Permission to canvass offices has been granted by building managers.

Scullin Sends Letter. The postmen will deliver an envelope which will contain pledge card, a postpaid letter, a postage-free envelope addressed to the St. Louis office of the Department of Commerce, and a letter of explanation from Harry Scullin, general chairman of the St. Louis committee.

If the consumer wishes to sign he may do so, mailing the signed pledge card in the enclosed envelope and retaining the insignia for display in a window or on an automobile windshield. If he does not wish to sign, he is asked to return the insignia by mail in the enclosed envelope.

The Women's Division of the East St. Louis recovery organization will conduct a similar campaign to encourage signing of consumer agreements. The Women's Division is headed by Miss Martha Lyon Connolly.

Signing Is Voluntary. Signing of pledges by consumers and the President's agreement by employers is entirely voluntary. Failure to sign deprives the person of the privilege of displaying the blue eagle insignia denoting either consumer or employer membership.

Names of employers signing the President's agreement are listed weekly and posted in the postoffice. The names of persons who have not signed are not compiled by the Department of Commerce. Likewise, no list is to be made of persons who do not sign the consumers' agreement.

The St. Louis office of the Department of Commerce today received 1213 signed copies of the President's agreement, bringing the total for Missouri employers to 55,539. About 100,000 blank agreements were distributed in the State.

The Granite City Committee of the National Recovery Administration, after a parade this afternoon, will hold a mass meeting at the City Hall at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Congressman Walter Nesbit will speak. This afternoon was declared a holiday by Mayor A. M. Jennings.

'KINGFISH' LONG REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN 'CROWNED'

New York Paper Says U. S. Senator "Gravely Insulted" Man Who Hit Him.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The New York Sun says United States Senator Huey Long, self-styled Louisiana "Kingfish," took a punching Saturday night in a Long Island resort near Port Washington. The Sun does not name the assailant or give any details, except to say that the man had been "gravely insulted" by Long.

The Senator, the paper says, made no effort to resist the punching, and attendants at the "fashionable spot" placed him in a car and sent him away.

A telephone call to Senator Long, who is now in Milwaukee, says the Sun, resulted in a conversation "entirely unsatisfactory."

MANUFACTURERS RETAIN RIGHT TO HIRE AND FIRE WITHOUT REGARD TO UNION AFFILIATION

35-HOUR WEEK WITH 40-CENT MINIMUM

JOHNSON SAYS ORGANIZATION PROVISION DOES NOT MODIFY OR QUALIFY RECOVERY ACT OR SET PRECEDENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Administration approval yesterday brought the automobile manufacturing industry under a code of fair practice which recognizes the right of employers to hire and discharge their workers without regard to union affiliations.

In permitting the labor language proposed by the manufacturers to remain in the agreement, however, Gen. Hugh Johnson, Recovery Administrator, said to newspaper men that "if there's any thought that that statement (the labor clause) takes away any right conferred by the law to either side, that doubt should be dispelled immediately."

The administration statement accompanying the code made no comment on the report of the labor advisory board that its approval was based on the understanding that the labor clause neither modifies nor qualifies the recovery act, and that it does not establish a precedent in the preparation of any other code.

Explanation by Johnson. Nevertheless, the question confronted the administrator whether every industry attempting to prevent unionization of its plants would not insist on the language of the automobile agreement placed in its own code as a means of resisting organization. To this Johnson said:

"You have that all wrong. That was not the motive at all. They wanted that statement to come back at some highly misleading declaration from the opposite side."

"The claim was being made over and over again that nobody could get a job in the automobile plant or in fact get any of the benefits of the NRA without belonging to the union."

"Now that is not true and there is nothing in the law like that. As a case in point, take the labor benefits given by the NRA in the cotton industry, which is not at all unionized."

The labor clause has been the barrier between the workers and the manufacturers throughout consideration of the code. The industry at first proposed a clause expressly stipulating that employers "may continue the open shop policy."

Text of Provision. When Gen. Johnson issued a statement last week, however, that no interpretations of the law can be written into a code by anyone, the code committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce proposed the following language, which now stands approved:

"Without in any way attempting to qualify or modify by interpretation the provisions of the recovery act, the National Recovery Act, employers in this industry may exercise their right to select, retain or advance employees on the basis of individual merit, without regard to their membership or non-membership in any organization."

President Roosevelt approved the code at the Summer White House at Hyde Park without changing any of its provisions.

Most important of these, in addition to the labor clause, are the establishment of minimum hourly rates ranging from 40 to 45 cents, dependent on the size of the city in which the industry is, and fixing 48 hours as the maximum for any work week, with a maximum average of 38 hours a week over any six months period. The code becomes effective Sept. 5.

In further explaining the code's provisions in their final form, Johnson remarked to newspaper men that "I had to go out on the spot, to Detroit, to see conditions as they actually existed, rather than as they were represented to me at long distances, to make up my mind as to the advisability of inserting the labor condition."

Johnson made no reference to Henry Ford, only large manufacturer not represented, so far. He has said previously, however, that he regretted this situation, but that the recovery program would "be administered without fear or favor."

ROOSEVELT DIRECTS R. F. C. TO PROVIDE QUICK CREDIT FOR NRA MEMBER FIRMS

Regains Inverted Flight Record

LIEUT. TITO FALCONI

Circuit Court Puts Insurance Superintendent in Control of Company That Admits Insolvency.

State Superintendent of Insurance R. Emmett O'Malley today was appointed by Circuit Judge Williams to take charge of the Missouri State Life Insurance Co. The action was taken on a petition filed Saturday by Superintendent O'Malley alleging insolvency of the company, and followed a brief hearing in court.

Although not designated as such, O'Malley will be in effect receiver of the company, under provisions of State law. The decree vests in him title to all the assets of the company. He is authorized to appoint his own counsel.

An admission of insolvency, as alleged in O'Malley's petition, was made by the company in an answer filed by its general counsel, Allen May.

The huge impairment of the company's assets was disclosed by the report of an examination recently completed by a committee representing the convention of State insurance commissioners, which was placed in evidence. This report completed Aug. 23, gave the value of the company's assets as $122,242,575, against liabilities of $122,961,746, a deficit of $719,071. Assets were carried at a book value of about $155,000,000 as of Dec. 31, 1932.

Form of Decree Agreed On. The confession of insolvency in the answer filed by Attorney May was authorized by the company's board of directors at a special meeting today. James P. Aylward, of Kansas City, attorney for Supt. O'Malley, told the court that the Insurance Department wanted an immediate judgment of insolvency against the company but was not now asking for an order of dissolution.

A form of decree was agreed upon by the attorneys, finding the company insolvent and designating the State Insurance Superintendent to take charge of the company as provided by law.

As has been told, negotiations are under way for a group of New York men to form a new company called the General American Life Insurance Co., to take over and reinsure

FLIES UPSIDE DOWN ST. LOUIS TO JOLIET FOR A NEW RECORD

Lieut. Tito Falconi of Italian Army Regains Championship—Aloft 3 Hours and 6 Minutes.

Lieut. Tito Falconi, a shy, wiry young man with a resolute chin and dancing black eyes, took his airplane off from Lambert-St. Louis Field yesterday, rolled it over on its back as he cleared the airport, and stayed in that position for three hours, six minutes and 30 seconds, setting a new world's record for inverted flight.

When Falconi, an officer of Italy's crack Air Force, rolled his airplane back into normal flight position, he was over Joliet, Ill., 240 miles northeast. He had been compelled to abandon his plan to fly all the way to Chicago with his wheels in the air because one of three supporting safety straps broke and he was cramped and tired from hanging in his seat by the remaining two.

Long Flight Before Start. Altogether, it had been a day of flying to test the endurance of even the huskiest flyer. Falconi had arisen early in Tulsa, Ok., his previous stop on a flight from the Pacific Coast, and had set off for St. Louis before dawn.

Arriving at Lambert-St. Louis Field at 9:40 a. m., he was escorted by a Chamber of Commerce reception committee to breakfast while his mechanic, who had followed in another plane, serviced Falconi's ship, filling its 45-gallon gasoline tank and adding a gallon of castor oil to its lubrication supply.

St. Louis flyers observed the Italian pilot's plans with interest, since it is a type seldom seen in America. It is a small Caproni biplane about the size of the run of American commercial two and three seater, driven by a 375-horsepower Pielou engine, far more powerful than would be needed for ordinary commercial or sport flying.

Made for Inverted Flying. Falconi explained that the plane was designed for the inverted flight practice which the Italian Air Force insists on as part of its flyers' training regimen. The plane has a relatively low landing speed, coupled with phenomenal climbing ability and a high speed of about 140 miles an hour.

When Falconi climbed into the plane at 11:40 o'clock, pilots noted that he used no parachute. "Don't need it," he explained with a quick nod on its way without a shot being fired.

PURPOSE TO SPAN GAP TILL INCOME BEGINS TO GAIN

President Discusses With Chairman Jones Methods to Enable Employers to Meet Immediate Increase in Overhead.

BANKS EXPECTED TO BE ASKED TO AID

Action Taken to Meet Complaints From Some Communities That Credit to Meet New Demands Is Not Available.

By the Associated Press.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt today directed the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to establish a medium for quick and temporary credit to the members firms of the NRA to span the period over the period between increased overhead and later returns. He talked over with Jesse Jones, the chairman of the $3,000,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation, his ideas of expanding credit to meet the needs of the new deal.

Jones left for Washington after a three-hour conference to go to work with other Government agents in working out the Roosevelt order.

Jones made it clear that the plan for providing credit had not been worked out. It is intended to do it through the regular banking system, but whether it will be directly through the banks or the Federal Reserve System has not been determined.

It is a question of getting the banks to turn loose their available credit to tide over the period of readjustment. While there are no general demands for increased credit, nevertheless in some scattered communities there are complaints that the credit to meet the new demands is not available. The problem results from increased overhead coming from the granting of more jobs and increase in wages. About a 50-per cent credit is believed sufficient to carry the needs for the readjustment.

President Discusses Works Plan With Secretary Ickes.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of Interior Ickes talked today about making more jobs through the $3,000,000,000 public works program. Also, the President received a list of recommendations for members of the important oil planning and co-ordination committee.

After the conference Ickes said the administration was considering putting a forfeiture clause into public works allotments to force immediate use of Government funds.

The President will motor up state tomorrow to inspect new bridges across the Hudson near Albany and Troy in his first call at the state capital since entering the White House. He will call on Gov. Lehman.

MAN WOUNDED BY MACHINE GUN FIRE ON STREET IN CHICAGO

Pedestrians Endangered as Alleged Alcohol Peddler Is Shot Down.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Four gangsters in an automobile spattered a crowded South Side street with machine gun bullets today, endangering the lives of women and children, and gravely wounding John Scallitti, 37 years old, said by police to be an alcohol peddler, probably fatally.

The automobile speeded down West Sixth-third street, slowed down as it came opposite Scallitti, and the muzzle of a submachine gun was pushed through an open window.

Passersby fled for doorways and between buildings at the first burst of fire. Scallitti fell. He had bullet wounds in the abdomen. The automobile sped away.

A block away, a traffic policeman ran toward the car, signaling for it to stop. One of the gunmen pointed the machine gun at him. He halted, and the automobile went on its way without a shot being fired.

HOUSE-TO-HOUSE DRIVE STARTED BY NRA VOLUNTEERS

1,500,000 Workers Carrying Message of Blue Eagle to Every Business and Millions of Homes.

"WE CAN'T AFFORD TO FAIL," JOHNSON SAYS

He Cautions, However, Against "Even a Shadow of Boycott, Intimidation and Violence."

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—NRA volunteers—1,500,000 strong—opened today under Hugh S. Johnson's mandate "we cannot afford to fail," a campaign to implant the blue eagle in every business house and in millions of homes.

Speeding this "greatest corps of volunteers in the country's history" on its door-to-door canvass, Johnson told his workers and the country that "either through codes or agreements we enter this drive with between 70 and 80 per cent of the employers in trade and industry already under the blue eagle."

The Recovery Administrator in a radio address last night described the drive as "a milestone in human progress," explaining:

"For the first time the American people has a chance to test in business a principle that they long ago approved in government. That principle is the trite old slogan, 'in union there is strength.'"

"Buy Under the Blue Eagle." "Buy under the blue eagle" was the watchword set by Johnson for his volunteers after saying that "even a shadow" of "boycott, intimidation and violence" would spoil this whole endeavor. He added:

"But there must not be the slightest misunderstanding. It is not a boycott for the people of a distressed country to say they are going to stick to those who do their part to cure a common evil and to ignore those who refuse to do so. To do otherwise would be to frustrate the nation's purpose."

When Johnson made his address he had just completed one of the NRA's biggest tasks and was deep in critical negotiations to try for completion of a second. The first was the automobile code, which now signed by President Roosevelt, will be binding on all that industry, except the Ford Co., on Sept. 5 the day after Labor day. Ford, virtually the only holdout, will have a further 10-day period to determine his course.

The second task was the attempt to obtain an agreement between non-union coal operators and union labor on a code for all the bituminous fields. Negotiations were at a standstill with both sides looking to President Roosevelt and Johnson for the next move. The administration has the power—heretofore unused—to impose a code if no agreement is reached.

Instructions to Volunteers.
Johnson sent forth his volunteer corps with a reminder that "you are patient missionaries and neither snoopers nor policemen." He added:

"For about two weeks we shall confine all action to an intense effort to see that the obligations of the Blue Eagle are understood by every man who flies one. In the meantime we shall collect evidence in the few important reported cases of big and thoroughly informed employers who seek knowingly and willfully to have taken on this obligation with a deliberate intention of violating it to mislead and defraud their employees and their customers."

"The opening gun of the enforcement campaign will be a painstaking fair open, public hearing of these cases and if they prove to be what reports indicate, we shall use every lawful and proper means to protect the public and their competitors against such destructive, unpatriotic and unfair conduct."

"Wherever the Blue Eagle flies we shall keep his wings clean and his talons sharp."

ONE KILLED, 10 SERIOUSLY HURT IN EXPLOSION IN OIL REFINERY

Eight Others Slightly Injured at Whiting, Ind., 50 Escaped After Warning.

By the Associated Press.
WHITING, Ind., Aug. 28.—One man was fatally burned and 10 others were injured, 10 seriously today by a gas explosion in the Whiting refinery of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Officers of the company said about 50 other workers escaped injury because of a warning given by L. C. Wheeler, an assistant superintendent. Wheeler noticed the odor of the escaping gas before the explosion.

The seriously injured were taken to St. Catherine's Hospital at East Chicago. Those less seriously hurt were treated in the company's first aid hospital and either returned to their tasks or left for home. Mike Balog died in the hospital several hours after the explosion.

The explosion occurred in an unused unit of the refinery. One of the most seriously burned was A. R. Weiss of Huntington Park, Cal., an engineer for the Pacific Pump Co., of which his brother is president.

ILLINOIS MAN CHARGED WITH POISON MURDER

Alleged to Have Killed Woman—His Father in Serious Condition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
PITTSFIELD, Ill., Aug. 28.—State's Attorney Johnson today had a warrant charging murder issued for Charlie Hall, a son of Tom Hall, a wealthy farmer. The youth is charged with poisoning his father and Mrs. Lucy Tucker by putting poison in their coffee.

Mrs. Tucker, who was working at the Hall home, died this morning. The condition of Hall is serious. Evidence at the coroner's inquest was that the son and father had frequent disputes. At the meal where the poisoned coffee is alleged to have been served Charlie did not drink any, and his mother never drank coffee. Neither became ill. After the others became ill, the youth came to Pittsfield, asked the County Judge to commit him to the State Insane Hospital as a voluntary patient, which was done, but today Sheriff Johnson brought him back from the asylum and lodged him in jail on the murder charge.

The father at various times has set the son up in business for himself, the boy having owned and operated a grocery in Pittsfield, one at Nebo, and a garage at Detroit and later a fruit store in Pittsfield. He recently returned from Kansas City, Mo., where he had been operating a highway lunch counter.

RIOTING IN U. S. PRISON AT LEAVENWORTH REPORTED

Tear Gas Said to Have Been Used and Convicts Chained to Cell Bars.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Aug. 28.—Reports of a fresh outbreak at the main Federal penitentiary here, in which it became necessary to subdue rioting convicts with tear gas, were circulated freely here today although Warden F. G. Zerbst denied there had been any disturbance. An official connected with the penitentiary declared however that the rioting reports were true but declined to be quoted.

It was reported the rioting first started Saturday night in cell house D, where the long term prisoners are held. Guards brought the disturbance under control. Last night, however, a more serious disturbance broke out, it was said, and tear gas was thrown into the cell house. While the convicts were semi-conscious from the gas, masked guards entered the cell house, handcuffed seven leaders of the rioters to the bars in front of their cells and quieted the rest of the prisoners. The cause of the disturbance could not be learned.

AUTO CODE SIGNED WITH EMPLOYERS' CLAUSE ON LABOR to every manufacturer, both large and small.

Labor agrees reluctantly. Objections of labor to the proposed minimum rates of pay and maximum hours were withdrawn when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said "we reluctantly agreed to the terms, although we thought minimum pay should be higher and maximum hours lower."

Green had proposed a minimum hourly rate of pay of 60 cents and a work week not to exceed 30 hours.

Pledging co-operation with the Government in the administration of the new code, Alvan Macauley, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, announced that all members of the chamber had now telephoned their approval of the agreement.

Macauley said that "from the outset we have made it clear that we had no desire to qualify or modify the labor provisions of the National Recovery Act."

All that we have sought has been a clear expression of our right to maintain operations for the best interests of our workers and our companies," he added.

Pointing out the industry has stepped up its wages in recent months without waiting for a code, Macauley said efforts already had been begun before that to shape its hours of labor to spread work.

"Looking at the code as a whole, leaders in the automobile industry feel that it is a distinct contribution to the great objective sought by the administration—that of getting men back to work," he said.

Price Advances Probable.

Macauley, in noting that the code contains no request for price-fixing or relaxation of any provisions of the anti-trust laws, said:

"Later as we study our own trade practices, if we find conditions existing which could be eliminated in the interest of keeping prices down to consumers, then we shall ask the Government to consider them."

On possible price advances, the automobile chamber president said:

"While all of these efforts necessarily mean increases in cost, we shall continue to do all that we can to keep prices down to the consumer. Price advances are inevitable, of course, but it is our hope that the increased employment coming from the Recovery Act will result in increased purchasing power which will enable us to expand production. As this is accomplished, many more thousands will be given work."

ACCUSED OF DEFRAUDING U. S. OUT OF $10,000 ON INSURANCE

Negro Woman, Husband Killed, Falsely Claimed to Be Victim of Murder.

By the Associated Press.
PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28.—Mrs. Wilma Buford, Negro woman who can neither read nor write, has been charged with defrauding the Government of $10,000.

Government investigators say the woman presented the death certificate of her husband, William Buford, killed in a recent automobile accident, and was paid the money as war risk insurance on William Buford, World War veteran.

The Government now charges that William Buford was not only a white man, but is still alive, and it wants the $10,000 back.

Most of the money has been invested in Government bonds, investigators say, but $700 went for an automobile.

Five Tourists Robbed.

GENESEE, Ill., Aug. 28.—Five Omaha tourists, en route to the World's Fair at Chicago, were robbed $120, two watches and their luggage to five robbers near here early today. The victims were Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Huffman, and a daughter of the Huffmans. They borrowed $15 from William Stubb, a farmer, and continued toward Chicago after replacing an ignition distributor.

STATE OFFICIAL PLACED IN CHARGE OF MO. STATE LIFE

the business of the Missouri State Life. This involves placing liens against loan and cash surrender values of Missouri State Life policies to offset the deficit between assets and liabilities. It would mean holders of policies subject to liens could not have the benefit of full loan and cash surrender values until the liens were satisfied through profits of the new company or appreciation in value of assets.

250,000 Policy Holders.

The Missouri State, one of the country's largest stock life insurance companies, has about 250,000 policy holders and more than $1,000,000,000 of insurance in force. It operates in 38 states.

One of the duties of the Superintendent O'Malley, as agent in charge of the company, will be to receive proposals for purchase of the company's assets, and reinsurance of its policy holders. He is authorized by law to accept the most advantageous offer, subject to approval of the Court. He has stated that he approves the plan proposed by the General American Life Insurance Co. group, headed by Walter W. Head and David M. Milton of New York. Other offers are likely.

Details of $300,000 Loan.

Other details of the $300,000 loan by which Julius H. Barnes of New York, and associates, gained control of the company a few months ago, were learned today. The money was borrowed by the Barnes group from three St. Louis banks—$500,000 from the First National, and $150,000 each from the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and the Southern National Bank.

Shortly after completion of the deal, it was announced that the Missouri State had purchased the notes from the banks, paying them $800,000 in cash, thus making the company the real lender of the money with which Barnes acquired control of it. President W. T. Nardin of the company stated today, however, that the company negotiated loans of $800,000 on its own account from the three banks, in order to satisfy the Barnes loans. The company's loans have been paid except for $125,000 still due the First National Bank, Nardin said. A payment of $350,000 was made to the First National last week.

JOHNSON MOVES TO IMPOSE CODE ON COAL INDUSTRY

Administrator Reported Writing One to Be Ready Tomorrow Unless Operators Break Deadlock.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—With a code of fair practice for the automobile industry approved by President Roosevelt yesterday at Hyde Park, Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson today moved to impose a code on the bituminous coal industry unless it arrives at an agreement before tomorrow morning. There was no indication that such an agreement would be reached.

A few hours after approval of the automobile code yesterday, operators of non-union coal mines brought in a proposed code which contained a labor provision identical with that which aroused such fierce controversy over the automobile code. Labor leaders at once cited this as showing that the provision was intended to cloak anti-union activities.

Coal operators met this morning in the office of Deputy Administrator Kenneth Simpson, who presided over the coal hearings, while leaders of the miners' union met in another room with Chief Counsel Donald Richberg. Notwithstanding strenuous efforts to bring them together, they appeared to be farther apart than at any stage since the negotiations began. The non-union operators were obviously heartened by the inclusion of the labor provision in the automobile code.

The guild dividing anti-union and pro-union operators was virtually the same as that separating anti-union operators and the miners' union. Middle Western operators, led by George Harrington of Illinois, are in complete agreement with the United Mine Workers on wages, hours and recognition of the union. The non-union operators of the Northern and Southern Appalachian fields are at odds with the others on all three.

A series of conferences yesterday did nothing to heal the breach, and Gen. Johnson today was reported to be working on a code which he has decided he will impose on the industry unless it agrees on one.

Green Objects to Labor Clause.

William F. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and member of the Labor Advisory Board, declared this afternoon that the board would object to the inclusion of such a provision as the automobile labor clause in any subsequent code. The automobile code is temporary, expiring Dec. 31. Efforts would be made to have the provision excluded when the code was renewed, Green said.

"Although it appears on its face to be meaningless," he added, "we have good reason to believe that the automobile manufacturers will try to read some meaning into it. Some of them have already announced that they will make it their excuse for posting notices on the walls of their plants, telling workers that they do not have to join any union, and that they will receive better treatment if they do not join. That is precisely what we feared."

GETS LIGHT FROM PRESIDENT

Forestry Youth Uses Roosevelt's Cigarette to Start Own.

By the Associated Press.
HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 28.—One of the civilian conservation camp workers on Bear Mountain asked President Roosevelt for a light yesterday. The youth saw Robert Clark, secret service man, standing by the presidential car, light up. He asked Clark for a cigarette. Getting the cigarette he turned to Roosevelt, who was smoking, and asked for a light.

The President flicked the ash off his cigarette and handed it to the youth who puffed a light from it. "Okay," said the President.

TEXAS 23D STATE IN REPEAL PARADE BY 114,000 VOTES

3.2 Per Cent Beer Also Legalized by Referendum and May Be Sold After Midnight Sept. 14.

By the Associated Press.
DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 28.—Final tabulation by the Election Bureau of the vote in the Texas referendum on repeal of the eighteenth amendment, showed a majority of 114,485 for repeal with 444,848 votes counted.

Thus Texas is the twenty-third state to repudiate national prohibition. The State has been dry for 14 years.

The voters also legalized 3.2 per cent beer. The beer may be sold after midnight Sept. 14. The majority for beer was 128,306.

The Election Bureau, a semi-official organization maintained by newspapers to get election results in advance of the official count, estimated that less than 100,000 votes were outstanding and that these were so scattering as not to change the announced result materially.

The State convention to ratify the proposed twenty-first (repeal) amendment to the Federal Constitution, will meet in Austin Nov. 24.

Washington State to Vote on Repeal Tomorrow.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 28.—Washington will vote on repeal of the prohibition amendment tomorrow—the twenty-fourth to vote on this proposition.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said yesterday, "I am satisfied that even the most ardent anti-repealists believe that the repeal of the eighteenth amendment is assured."

Kennah was cut and bruised. Mrs. Myrtle Kennah, 32 years old, suffered a skull injury. Their children, Shirley, 6, and Ralph Jr., 17 months, were cut. The bus driver, Kenneth Clark, secret service man, standing by the presidential car, light up. He asked Clark for a cigarette. Getting the cigarette he turned to Roosevelt, who was smoking, and asked for a light.

COTTON GOODS PRICE HEARING ON SEPT. 1

Textile Manufacturers Contend Processing Tax Has Caused Drop in Consumption.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Textile manufacturers who ascribe the decline in cotton goods consumption to the processing tax will have a chance to present their evidence to Administrator George N. Peek on Sept. 1. Dr. Fred C. Howe, consumers' counsel of the agricultural adjustment administration, said today that the hearing had been called because of statements of manufacturers.

Howe said the manufacturers contended the processing tax placed on cotton in 1932 had forced them to raise prices too high, thereby reducing consumption.

"This tax, which amounts to 42 cents per pound of the net weight of cotton, is to cover the cost of the adjustment program which aims to give farmers a better price for cotton," Howe said.

"Cotton mill consumption was speeded up to an unprecedented extent in June and July. Such a rate in June and July, such a rate was beyond any that could be maintained even at the peak of prosperity. Administrator Peek's inquiry will seek to determine what effect the overloading of the shelves of wholesalers and retailers has had on the reported falling off of sales."

MIXED TREND OF PRICES IN THE STOCK MARKET

General Motors Reaches a New High for the Year Before Profit-Taking.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Unusual strength in the dollar and weakness in the commodity brought a mixed price trend into the stock market today.

While the list as a whole showed no acute weakness, such strength as did appear was confined to a few of the leading stocks, outstanding among which was General Motors. General Motors was taken in blocks ranging from 1000 to 2000 shares and advanced nearly a point to a new high for the year before meeting with profit-taking which pared the gain slightly.

Strength in New York Central bolstered the other rail shares.

AMERICANS WARNED IN CHINESE AREA.

By the Associated Press.
FOOCHOW, China, Aug. 28.—Fighting between Communists and provincial troops became so widespread in Northern Fukien Province today that United States consular officers here warned all Americans in the area to withdraw.

Physicians have noted that nearly all of those who died were aged children under 10, or suffering from chronic illness or otherwise weakened by physical or mental strain. Several hospitals have discharged patients, as many as six in one day, as apparently fully recovered. Patients are isolated in home or hospital for three weeks after onset of the disease.

Insects of various sorts are being reported to the scientific investigators, usually by laymen. Most bizarre was a report by a man, who said he had been in Borneo, that he had seen an insect here like the tsetse fly, indigenous to Africa and identified as the carrier of African "sleeping sickness." Experts have found no similarity between the tsetse fly and the African sleeping sickness, and doubted that the tsetse fly could be found in many thousands of miles of St. Louis.

Human Carrier Theory.

Dr. L. L. Williams Jr., United States Public Health Service expert on disease-bearing insects, is in charge of that phase of the investigation. He is going into every possible cause or mode of transmission.

The experts hold that the most likely means of transmission is the human carrier, who may not have had the disease.

In that view, Health Commissioner Brecked reiterated his call for physicians to isolate all cases that look like sleeping sickness until it could be definitely established that the patients did not have the disease.

Letter on Disease Sent to Every Health Officer in United States.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—A special letter on epidemic encephalitis, the sleeping sickness which has struck St. Louis and neighboring localities, was sent from the United States Public Health Service yesterday to every state, city and local health officer in the United States.

Symptoms of the disease are given in scientific language in the letter, so that physicians everywhere may be on the lookout to prevent further spread of the malady.

An almost daily check by telephone on the St. Louis situation by the Public Health Service preceded the issuance of the letter. Three experts of the service, in St. Louis studying the disease, contributed information to the summary that was sent out—Dr. J. P. Leake, Dr. Charles Armstrong and Dr. L. L. Williams Jr.

Public health officials said they considered it highly important that every health officer have a summary of this disease on his desk for immediate study and ready reference.

MONTHLY UTILITY FINANCIAL REPORTS ORDERED IN ILLINOIS

State Commission Intends to Use Data of Gas and Electric Companies for Rate Making.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—The Illinois Commerce Commission today ordered all gas and electric utility companies in the State to furnish the commission with monthly financial reports, which the commission plans to use in rate making. They will enable the commission to keep an "up-to-the-minute check on the business being done by utilities," said Chairman Benjamin F. Lindheimer of the commission.

The ruling required that the utilities show income for the current month and for 11 previous months. Transactions with affiliated companies, and income from sale of gas or electricity to domestic, commercial and power users must be shown in separate columns.

"The statements also are to show operating expense, amounts of taxes paid, collectable bills, dividends, charges made on surplus accounts, and other information," the commission stated. "We expect the new rule will give the commission a comprehensive picture of the effects of rate reductions. The commission will know at a glance whether the business of a particular corporation is on the increase or decrease."

Mayor Broadens Investigation of Appointments to Temporary Building Inspectors.

An inquiry into rumors that some of the men appointed as temporary city building inspectors had paid for their jobs was ordered today by Mayor Dickmann.

Before leaving for Washington the Mayor conveyed that instruction to Assistant City Counselors Sent and Wayman, who are engaged in an investigation of apparent irregularities in an Efficiency Board examination for building inspectors last week.

In that examination, as has been told, 18 of the 82 applicants submitted perfect answers in language which corresponded closely to that used in the official answer sheet. Eight of the 16 are among the 10 now serving as temporary inspectors. Results of the first examination were nullified and a new one was held today.

Herman Draper, 19, of Pine Lawn, Meets Death Near Lincoln, Ill., on His Way to Chicago.

Herman Draper, 19 years old, of Pine Lawn, was killed when an automobile, in which he had begged a ride, collided with another automobile seven miles south of Lincoln, Ill., yesterday.

Seven persons suffered minor injuries in the crash. They were: Daniel Whitlock of Kansas City, Mo., in whose car Draper was riding; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Holden of Hammond, Ind.; their three children, and J. D. Sanifer, 78, of Gary, Ind.

Draper was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Draper, 2127 Louise avenue. Yesterday morning his mother took him to the Chain of Rocks Bridge, where he was to meet a neighbor, who was driving to Chicago in a moving van. He did not wait for the van, getting a ride in Whitlock's automobile instead.

Killed When Auto Crashes Into Freight Car at Alton.

Hamilton Mitchell, 312 Royal street, Alton, was killed early yesterday when thrown out of his automobile which swerved from East Broadway, Alton, and struck a freight car. Two young men riding with him were thrown out also. They suffered superficial injuries.

Witnesses said Mitchell's car, a small roadster, was traveling east in Broadway at high speed when Mitchell turned out to pass a street car and apparently lost control. The machine ran up a siding between Cherry and Vine streets, hit the freight car and turned over twice, throwing out Mitchell and the other two.

The impact started the freight car moving down the track, but a passerby climbed to the roof and set the brakes after the car had moved about 100 feet.

Mitchell was dead when police arrived, having suffered a crushed skull. His passengers, Robert Turner, 25 years old, and August Tuttle, 21, both of Alton, received emergency treatment and were taken home. Mitchell, who was 34 years old, was an inspector at the Owens-Illinois Glass Co.

2000 ON STRIKE TRYING TO COMPEL UNION RECOGNITION

Millinery Division of Cloth Hat Organization Say Employers Refuse to Deal With Its Representatives.

The millinery division of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' Union, with about 2000 members, went on strike today because they said employers refused to recognize the organization, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and declined to meet with union officials to discuss working conditions and wages.

The millinery workers bring the total number of employees out in major strikes in St. Louis to about 5200. About 2000 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have been on strike since Aug. 10. Last Friday about 1200 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, makers of men's clothing, walked out.

George Baer, local organizer for the Millinery Union, said the strike was complete and that about 40 factories were affected. He said, at a meeting Saturday when the strike was voted, that employers had used subterfuge to evade payment of minimum wages provided by the National Recovery Administration code to which they had agreed to adhere.

The men's harvest and straw hat division of the union will consider joining the strike at a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at Hibernian Hall, 3619 Finney avenue.

Mayor Dickmann announced today he had appointed a National Recovery Administration mediation board to attempt to settle strikes. The names of its members, he said, would not be announced until they had accepted the appointment. Two members were selected from a list submitted by workers, two from those suggested by employers and three to represent the general public.

"This board," the Mayor said, "is appointed, not so much because of the seriousness of the situation, but more because of my conviction that the complaints which have come to me from both employers and workers pertain to differences which are easy of solution.

"Complaints have come to me that some employers are discriminating against workers for joining or refraining from joining a particular labor organization. If that be true, such employers are violating the provisions of the N.R.A. Such discharges in advance of the acceptance of true codes inevitably arouse suspicion and tend to foment unrest and discord.

"Complaints also have been made that some strikes have been threatened or hastily called without adjustment for reasonable adjustment. If that be true it is in violation of the national policy.

"In appointing this board, I do not attempt to dictate either to employers or workers, but I appeal to both to avail themselves of its good offices. Our country is greater than any individual business. The rights of the whole people are superior to the rights of any one group."

A parade of members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union announced for today was postponed by Ben Gilbert, local manager of the union, because of the absence from the city of Mayor Dickmann and City Counselor Hay, who had been asked to address the strikers when the parade ended at City Hall.

The strikers met at the Gayety Theater for a mass meeting. Gilbert said the parade probably would be held later this week.

Members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, called an afternoon mass meeting at the Gayety Theater. Hyman Schneid, organizer, said he had asked the Department of Labor to appoint a mediator to compose differences between strikers and employers.

POSTMASTER MICHENER SUBMITS RESIGNATION

Effective Sept. 30—Senator Clark Indorses Rufus Jackson for Appointment.

Postmaster Athol J. Michener today announced that he had forwarded his resignation to the Post-office Department in Washington, to take effect Sept. 30. He will retire at that time from the postal service, at the age of 70, and after 44 years in the service, from substitute carrier to Postmaster.

W. Rufus Jackson, an active Democratic party worker, who was Postmaster of Mexico, Mo., under President Wilson, and who has been in advertising and publicity work in St. Louis, is expected to be Michener's successor. Senator Bennett C. Clark announced several months ago, that he would recommend Jackson for appointment as Postmaster when the office should become vacant.

Michener will receive a retirement allowance of $100 a month for life. This is the regular allowance for a retiring postal employee, and is not higher for the head of the office than for a clerk or a carrier. He lives at 8877 Nina place.

Michener entered the postal service at the age of 26, leaving a clerkship for a short time to start at the bottom of the substitute carrier list. As a youth, he had traveled about the United States, and had visited the principal cities of Europe.

When he got a regular job as carrier, at $50 a month, he was assigned to the City Hall and later to the Merchants' Exchange. He made friends of politicians and business men, some of whom were able to aid in his advancement years afterward. He rose from the position of carrier to superintendent of mails, over the entire St. Louis area, under the Postmaster.

When Postmaster Louis Al died in 1927, Michener was made acting postmaster. The postmastership was generally considered a political plum, and it was at first assumed that a man with political backing would get the place. Business men, however, suggested Michener's appointment, and Congressman L. C. Dyer, who was in a position to make a recommendation, announced that Michener would be satisfactory to him. So the appointment was made. The first time in many years that the head of the St. Louis Postoffice had come up from the ranks.

Michener was reappointed by President Hoover in 1931, and confirmed by the Senate. After the change in national administration, appointment of a new Postmaster became inevitable, but no objection was made to Michener's remaining long enough to qualify for retirement with pay.

4 VOLUNTEER FIREMEN KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Detonation Occurs Soon After They Begin to Fight Blaze at What Cheer, Ia.

By the Associated Press.

WHAT CHEER, Ia., Aug. 23.—Four firemen were killed in an explosion in a two-story brick grocery store and meat market which caught fire here yesterday.

The explosion occurred 10 minutes after the firemen arrived to battle a blaze which broke out in the meat market about 1:30 a. m. The dead: Oscar Roland, Leslie Herman, William Phillips and Marvin Botman.

Otto Bruhn, owner of the meat market, was injured when he tried to enter the store to obtain some money in the safe. He reached the door just as the explosion shattered the front. His skull was fractured. The cause of the fire and explosion was undetermined. Damage to the building was approximately $15,000. It was partly insured.

COURTROOM CROWDED FOR THE LAMSON TRIAL

Hearing Resumed With X-Ray Expert on Stand Discussing Fatal Wound.

By the Associated Press.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Aug. 23.—Crowds surged about the doors of Judge Robert R. Syer's court today as the second week of David A. Lamson's murder trial opened.

The courtroom was filled to capacity a half hour before the session started, and outside groups of persons, hopeful of obtaining seats during the day, stood chatting. Included in the spectators were Kathleen and Charles Norris, the novelists.

As the 31-year-old executive of the Stanford University Press entered the room, accompanied from the jail by a Deputy Sheriff, his face lighted in a smile as his eyes met those of his sister, Dr. Margaret Lamson and Mrs. Willis Tholts, who have attended each session.

The defendant, accused of beating to death his young and attractive wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson, last Memorial day, in their campus bungalow, chatted with his attorneys for a few minutes before the session started.

Dr. Robert A. Powers, Palo Alto roentgenologist, was called to the stand to identify X-ray photographs he took of Mrs. Lamson's crushed head. Dr. Powers explained the various fractures. Answering questions of Assistant District Attorney Herbert Bridges, Dr. Powers said the depressed fracture was about one inch by one inch and that the fracture almost always is larger than the instrument which caused it.

PROF. MOLEY QUITS TO EDIT MAGAZINE FOR VINCENT ASTOR

and considered thought to the two happy and pleasant alternatives of either remaining in an official capacity in your administration or of discontinuing my professional interests in writing and teaching. The development of the idea of a national weekly which has now been consummated by Mr. Astor and his associates has provided for me the answer. I have decided that in joining in this new venture I can not only serve you best but also my own inclinations and interests.

"The regret that I should otherwise experience at severing my official tie with your administration is absent on account of the fact that this new work permits me not only to further the ideals common to us both, but to continue to enjoy the friendly association with you that has marked the many months both before and since your inauguration.

"As you well know, my participation in national politics these past two years has arisen from two motives, the one my friendship for you together with the deep conviction with which I have shared your political views, and the other my personal dedication as a life work to the writing and teaching of politics and government. This new venture enables me to fulfill both of these purposes in a way that no official or business office would permit.

"My service as an official in the Government was professedly temporary. It has continued through the preliminaries of your administration and now reaches a convenient time for its termination. I therefore offer you my resignation as Assistant Secretary of State to take effect, if convenient to you, Sept. 7. As I do so I pledge you my active and continued support of the ideals to which you have given such a hopeful and auspicious realization. I have with many thousands of others found renewed belief in turning the power of government to the alleviation of human burdens and of ordering for the better the economic life of the nation. We have believed and you have justified us in our belief.

"I regard this present opportunity to edit a national weekly as opening the door to a most important means of furthering these ideals.

"Friendship for you as a great warrior and chief and a deep sharing of political ideals are precious. These remain and give me encouragement and hope as I undertake this new task.

"Faithfully yours,
"RAYMOND MOLEY."

The President's reply:
"August 27, 1933.

"Dear Raymond:
"It is with a sense of deep personal regret that I accept your resignation as Assistant Secretary of State.

"I need not tell you that I appreciate and shall always remember your participation during these two years in the development of policies based on our common ideals. You have rendered a very definite service to your country; and your departure from an official position to undertake an editorship will give you opportunity to carry on the task in an equally wide field.

"The ending of our official relations will in no way terminate our close personal association. I shall count on seeing you often and in the meantime I send you every good wish and my affectionate regards.

"Faithfully yours,
"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Astor issued the following statement:

Plans for Weekly.

"Since shortly after President Roosevelt's inauguration, I, with three associates, have considered the practicability of establishing a national weekly; in somewhat new form but at a really popular price. Many preliminary problems lay in our path, problems that demanded long consideration and careful study. These now are solved. We therefore shall proceed with this enterprise, in the expectation of commencing publication about Oct. 1. I shall be the publisher, and associated with me are Mrs. Mary Rumsey, W. Averill Harriman and V. V. McNitt. All of these are to actively share in the management, and Mr. McNitt has accepted the position of executive editor.

"Throughout our negotiations, and our many consultations, Raymond Moley has played an active, helpful and inspiring part. We are indeed hopeful that he may find his way clear to join us as editor in this adventure in independent political journalism.

"As we see it, there is now, as surely never before, a wide and useful field for a free, impartial and vivid interpretation each week of the momentous changes taking place in our American life. There is also the need of a vehicle for the expression of those ideas and proposals that will tend to direct these forces along planned and progressive channels. To supply such a medium, dedicated to truly American ideals, we shall do our utmost."

Moley and Astor Say Magazine Long Has Been Planned.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—On their own initiative, Vincent Astor and Prof. Raymond Moley denied today any face-saving connection in their forthcoming publishing venture. They denied it in turn before a large assembly of reporters in Astor's downtown office.

"From reading the morning papers," said Astor, "one might be led to believe that Mr. Moley really resigned as Assistant Secretary of State as the result of disagreement in the State Department following the London conference. That isn't true."

"There is no denying the fact that resigning as a result of a conflict is interesting," said Prof. Moley, "but it just isn't so."

"For months we have been working over this magazine plan," said Astor.

"If you look through the file you'll find a radio asking me to lunch to discuss this thing the day I returned from London," said Moley.

"The idea began way back in March," said Astor. "We even had our searchers looking for a daily paper and once thought we had one—in Boston or Washington."

"I'd ten times rather do this than hold a public office," said Moley.

"Anyway," said Astor, "it indicates to you that this is not any sudden conception to find a place for Mr. Moley."

Moley will spend much of his time between Washington and New York. He will continue to teach at Columbia.

General Electric offers a cheaper and better way to heat your home

It opens a new era in automatic heating.

THE thing that G-E engineers have done in the past for other household products they have now done for the oil burner. Changed... simplified... perfected it.

Actually the G-E Furnace is not an oil burner at all. It's not an attachment you put inside a boiler intended for some other kind of fuel. It's a complete oil furnace, with a steel boiler specially designed for oil fuel. It is designed and built as one co-ordinated unit by General Electric Company, after five years of scientific research.

So good-looking is this furnace that you'll want to turn your cellar into a recreation room right away. And beautiful as is its appearance, the way it works is even more beautiful.

No soot, no dust, no noise. No feeling too chilly one day and too warm the next. Automatically (without thought or effort on your part) the temperature stays where you want it. All the hot water you want, too—winter or summer—at a big saving. In the summer, only the water is heated. The day you install the G-E

Oil Furnace your expenses go down, not up. Savings on fuel usually average 30% to 50%.

How is this possible? Through the unique design of the furnace itself. And through a new amazing principle called "Impact Expansion." This principle enables the furnace to burn a cheaper grade of oil—and makes it get a lot more heat out of that oil. Each tiny drop is broken down into millions of microscopic particles. And so each drop goes a lot further.

Used with either steam, hot water or vapor. No need to wait until fall. We offer special summer terms right now. A small down payment—enjoy hot water all summer long at a big saving—and no more payments until fall.

Mail the coupon now, while you think of it, for complete free information. No obligation.

SOME FARMERS TO TAKE PROFIT ON WHEAT CUT PLAN

Officials Learn Many Plan to Increase Production — Others Cannot Share in Reduction Benefits.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Disposition of the wheat surplus of the United States continues to be a major problem despite the policy of the agricultural adjustment administration, and the action of more than 20 governments in signing a pact to cut production and reopen foreign markets.

While one group in the Agriculture Department sought to speed up the campaign to reduce American wheat acreage, from another came word that two of the nation's largest producing areas will have vast "exportable surplus" this year—the Pacific Northwest and the Southwest.

The export movement of wheat has slowed down to a mere trickle compared with years past and doubts have arisen whether the wheat acreage reduction will offset increased production by farmers not joining in the curtailment plan. Reports are coming to farm administrators that many farmers, tempted by better prices for wheat and the drafting of national and international policies to improve the position of wheat growers, plan to expand production.

Export Plans Uncertain. Pending a study of the London agreement, administrators are withholding a decision on plans for subsidizing exports of the grain. They have looked to China as an outlet, but another group reported that "there is no immediate interest in buying foreign wheat" there.

The Bureau of Agriculture Economics estimated the "exportable surplus" at 101,000,000 bushels, most of it in the Pacific Northwest and Southwest, after allowing 128,000,000 bushels as a minimum carryover after domestic needs have been met from the potential supply. It would have been much higher except that this year's crop, the lowest since 1888, is estimated at less than 600,000,000 bushels. The July 1, carryover was 386,000,000.

Chance of Big Surplus. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace thinks that because world prices are substantially below American prices it may be impossible for this country to export as much as 40,000,000 bushels next year. It is possible that the nation will have on hand unexported more than 120,000,000 bushels of its "exportable surplus" in addition to a carryover of 128,000,000 bushels.

Administrators said rapid progress was being made in obtaining signatures from farmers to curtail their wheat plantings for next year up to a maximum of 20 per cent in return for Government cash benefits raised by the 30-cent processing tax on wheat.

Many farmers are ineligible to join in the reduction plan because they have not grown wheat in recent years though they have land capable of producing it. A possible result is that while 128,000,000 is distributed to farmers in consideration for cutting acreage, the nation's wheat acreage may be increased.

10,000 SIGN PETITION AGAINST MILK PACT FOR CHICAGO AREA

Group at Elgin Votes to Send Delegation With Pledge to Washington.

By the Associated Press. ELGIN, Ill., Aug. 28.—Two thousand dairy farmers voted yesterday to send a delegation to Washington with 10,000 signatures to a petition expressing dissatisfaction with the milk agreement for the Chicago area recently approved by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. They also voted to withhold all milk from the Chicago market if relief were not given in a few days. After the meeting, which was held in Wing Park near here, a group of delegates from nearby marketing areas met to draft a telegram to be sent to Wallace demanding a public hearing on the milk code.

Meanwhile, directors of the Kane County district of the Pure Milk Association sent a message to Don M. Geyer, manager of the association in Chicago, reporting that "the members of this district have nearly exhausted their patience and demand that the price negotiations with Chicago dealers be terminated at once."

PRACTICES WITH PISTOL, ENDS LIFE AT SHOOTING GALLERY

By the Associated Press. INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 28.—After a half hour's practice with a target pistol, William B. Polhemus, 34 years old, of San Francisco, ended his life here last night in a downtown shooting gallery.

Polhemus entered the gallery and for a while watched Herman Rubin of Chicago shoot. Finally he asked Rubin to show him how to handle the pistol. Rubin explained the weapon and left after shooting several rounds with Polhemus. Then Polhemus turned the pistol on himself, sent a bullet through the temple and died two hours later in city hospital.

Polhemus came to Indianapolis from Cleveland, O., six weeks ago. He was employed in the promotion department of a food concern.

AS SHIELDS IN JAIL BREAKThree of Men Recaptured After Escaping at Detroit During Religious Services.DETROIT, Aug. 28.—Slugging two guards and forcing a minister and a girl pianist ahead of them as shields, four prisoners escaped from the Wayne County Jail during religious services yesterday. Ten minutes later three of the four prisoners were recaptured, one of them after a pistol fight with officers in the heart of the downtown district.
The prisoners, Irvin Pyle, Julius Wild, William Ryan and Steven Andrews, slugged guards Alex Niede-lski and William McLeod with improvised blackjacks, took their keys and forced the Rev. Ernest C.
Packler and Miss Irene Outland, 20 years old, a pianist, to precede them from the jail. More than 100 other prisoners were in the assembly hall at the time.Gaining the street the prisoners separated. Pyle, cornered by De-

You can help put our unemployed back to workBuy from NRA members and your purchases will help create jobs*You, Mr. and Mrs. St. Louisan, have always wanted to help banish unemployment from our community. Perhaps the task has seemed too enormous. Or, you just didn't know where to begin, or what to do.Now, the NRA offers every citizen in St. Louis a chance to do his or her bit. Your part is simple. Easy to do. It costs you nothing—yet, it is all important.Buy from members of the NRA—the merchants that display the Blue Eagle. They are the employers who are co-operating with President Roosevelt for the common good of the nation.Already these local members of the NRA have taken on hundreds of new employees. Some have increased wages. This means more money to buy what you or your employer have to sell. It means that business will soon be better for your firm. It means that you will keep your job.But, NRA members cannot offer new jobs and pay higher wages unless someone buys the goods they sell. Failure to support Blue Eagle employers is failure to support increased wages and re-employment. That's plain common sense.Start Today!Begin doing your part today. Whether you need an automobile, a suit of clothes, or just a loaf of bread, look for the Blue Eagle before you buy. It's your chance to help put our unemployed back to work. It will mean prosperity for you and your neighbor. Give your full support to NRA.*Banish the tragedy and misery of unemploymentBring back higher wages and happiness for everyoneWhen Your Mail-Man Hands You One of These, every St. Louisan will be asked to and mail it.I will buy where I see the Blue Eagle—the official emblem of the NRA. I will do this because I want people to go back to work . . . wages to go up . . .

prosperity to come back. I promise to keep this

Lesmer Smith of Belleville Had Been Helpless Three Years With Fractured Spine.

Lesmer Smith, 29-year-old former coal miner, who had been bedridden for more than three years with a fractured spine, died Saturday night at his home in Belleville.

"Buster" Smith's death followed by five days that of his mother, Mrs. Frances Smith, 59 years old, who had taken care of him since he suffered the injury in a mine accident in March, 1930.

Smith was hurt by falling coal in a mine owned by his father, John W. Smith. The lower part of his body was paralyzed. Until the last illness of his mother he had hoped for recovery.

Capt. Harmon had taken off from

DENIES PAROLE TO ILLINOISAN CONVICTED OF BANK ROBBERY

Indiana Board Refuses to Accept Evidence Intended to Show Mistaken Identity.

By the Associated Press.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 28.—
The State Clemency Commission declined paroles to Clint Brooks, Mattoon, Ill., and Monte Crist, his alleged companion, in a robbery of the German-American Bank at Jasper, Ind., March 10, 1930. Brooks contended he was the victim of mistaken identity.

Ray Kelchel, assistant superintendent of the Illinois Division of Paroles, told the Clemency Commission his records showed a parole agent was visiting Brooks in Mattoon at the time of the Jasper robbery. The clemency board also was told two other men later confessed to robbery.

Jasper bank officials, however, reiterated their identification of both Brooks and Crist as the men who held up the institution.
The board was told by Kelchel that if Brooks were paroled, he would be returned to Illinois as a parole violator because he had been bootlegging.

other was injured seriously when a truck, in which they were hauling pigs to the National Stock-

Alvie Hinds, 60 years old, owner of the truck, was killed. J. K.
Watters, 49, is in serious condition at Missouri Baptist Hospital. The train demolished the truck, killing all but one of 80 pigs, which the men had planned to sell at the Government's premium market.

Hinds is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter. The Watters' and Hinds' farms are near Elsberry.

The train was bound for St.
Louis from Denver.

E. Hull, former Congressman and general manager of the project.

Sponsored by the Hiram Walker

the project was described by Hull as the "biggest single enterprise Peoria ever saw." The plant will cover acres on the Illinois River front, will make use of 20,000 bushels of corn a day and have a capacity of 20 carloads of liquor daily. Central Illinois counties, it is expected, will provide most of the corn.

A reduction of $1,600,000 a year on your electric bills in spite of the fact that our taxes have increased to $4,000,000 a year

THIS company has steadily been reducing electric rates for forty years.
This decrease in the price per unit went right through the pre-1929 boom when everything else was going up.

Efficient management plus your increased use of electricity have made these reductions possible. But there is one element of cost which is beyond our control.

That one element is taxes.

The taxes of this company and subsidiaries are now at the rate of over $4,000,000 per year and will exceed

$4,500,000 in 1934. That is more than $500 an hour—$12,000 a day!

We are not complaining of this. We are simply telling you because we believe you should know all the facts. Here they are:

Year	Total Taxes of Union Electric Light and Power Company and Subsidiaries	Cents per Dollar of St. Louis Revenue Required for Taxes	Amount of Taxes Included in Average St. Louis Electric Bill of $1.98
1910	$ 248,610.29	8.02 cents	18.93 cents
1920	1,050,303.86	12.01 cents	28.36 cents
1930	3,578,852.18	13.95 cents	32.02 cents
1931	3,669,616.64	14.67 cents	34.63 cents
1932	3,694,036.90	16.02 cents	37.80 cents
1933 (partly estimated)	4,020,315.52	18.53 cents	43.74 cents
1934 (estimated)	4,528,545.00	19.16 cents	45.33 cents

One important thing to remember is this—every time we absorb a new tax without increasing your electricity bill, we are really decreasing still further the price of electricity. With the new rates going into effect November 1, St. Louisans will have the distinction of paying a lower residence rate for electricity than the people of any other city in the United States.

3,000,000 CHINESE IN NEED AS RAIN FOLLOWS FLOODS

Governor of Shantung Reports Aerial Survey Shows That 800 Villages
Are Under Water.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 28.—Despite recent reports that floods of the Yellow River were receding, the Governor of Shantung reported today the disaster had reached grave proportions, with 3,000,000 refugees in the western part of the province alone.

After an aerial survey of the region, he advised the National Government at Nanking that 800 villages were under water. The Governor appealed for assistance to the sufferers.

Renewed rains in Shantung and Northeast Honan have caused the river to rise again.

Among those endangered in Honan Province are numerous foreign missionaries in the neighborhood of Kailfeng. None has as yet evacuated.

Advices from Tsinanfu, situated in Shantung, on the Yellow River, stated that the renewed rise constituted a serious menace to the city, in spite of efforts to strengthen its dikes. Many minor breaks were reported in the neighborhood, with dikes bulging under pressure of the water.

Nanking officials are attempting to organize relief. It was believed, however, that little was likely to be forthcoming, due to lack of funds. The Government was reported to be considering the issuance of bonds to supply aid for the flood victims.

It had been believed last week that after a fortnight of devastation the major danger was past.

SAYS NO COURT WILL DARE SET ASIDE NRA PROGRAM

Michigan Attorney-General Makes Statement Before Legal Heads of Several States.

By the Associated Press.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 28.—Patrick H. O'Brien, Attorney-General of Michigan, told delegates to the annual meeting of the National Association of Attorneys-General in a prepared address today that no court in the United States would dare set aside President Roosevelt's recovery program.

In his welcoming address to the legal heads of the several states, O'Brien declared that the National Industrial Recovery Act "offends against all the cherished constitutional maxims relating to the separation of law and the taking of private property for public use without just compensation."

"With the blue eagle of the National Recovery Act flowing from her masthead, the ship of state is sailing uncharted seas," he said. "With the President at the wheel, Congress and the courts must function as able seamen. Where is the Court that will attempt to mutiny? Where is the Court that will attempt by injunction to scuttle the ship?"

"Democracy is on the march. The courts of this country always will be respected as they always have been and ought to be, but no Court will be allowed to stand in the path of progress toward a more just and equitable social system."

COLORADO WATER PROGRAM

Expenditure of $150,000,000 in U. S.
Funds Recommended.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Aug. 28.—A program calling for Federal expenditure of $150,000,000 to utilize the water supply originating in Colorado mountains is outlined in a report George M. Bull, engineer for the State Advisory Board of the Federal Public Works Administration, dispatched yesterday.

Bull commented that Colorado's position in regard to water supply was unique in that its waters pass through or along the borders of 18 other states, which are interested in the supply as a source of irrigation and domestic water.

ENID WILSON'S 76 SETS NEW MARK IN U. S. TITLE GOLF TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.
EXMOOR COUNTRY CLUB, HIGHLAND PARK, Ill., Aug. 28.—Routing par with a great finish of two birdies and an eagle, Enid Wilson of England won the women's national golf championship medal today, with a record-breaking qualifying round of 78 shots.

The round, shot against a wind that sent most scores of the starters far above the eighties, broke the qualifying record held by four of America's stars by one stroke and captured the medal by a margin of two strokes from her closest competitors, Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, defending champion; Margaret Orcutt, Hawthorth, N. J., and Helen Hicks of New York, 1931 title holder.

The former qualifying low was made by Alexa Stirling Fraser at the St. Louis Country Club, 1925; Ada Mackenzie of Toronto, Canadian champion, at Cherry Valley, N. Y., 1927, and by Miss Orcutt and Miss Van Wie, who duplicated the mark in 1928's last year at Salem. The English champion's iron carried her to her record round today. Although she was in trouble at times with her long-range shots, she recovered brilliantly in most instances. Six birdies and one eagle, scored on the 290-yard eighteenth, where she laced out an iron 160 yards to within eight feet of the cup, were on her card. Her rounds were 39-37.

Mrs. Leona Cheney of San Gabriel, Cal., another of America's best to beat back the third and finally last attempt of Miss Wilson to win the national title, landed fourth among the leaders with 78. Lucille Robinson of Des Moines, conqueror of Miss Van Wie in the finals of the 1932 Women's tourney, was in safety with an 81 as was Frances Williams, Wayne, Pa., star, and Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City. Charlotte Glutting of West Orange, N. J., who upset Miss Wilson in the quarterfinals at Salem last year, one-up, qualified with 82.

WILSON'S 76 SETS NEW MARK IN U. S. TITLE GOLF TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.
EXMOOR COUNTRY CLUB, HIGHLAND PARK, Ill., Aug. 28.—Routing par with a great finish of two birdies and an eagle, Enid Wilson of England won the women's national golf championship medal today, with a record-breaking qualifying round of 76 shots.

The round, shot against a wind that sent most scores of the start far above the eighties, broke the qualifying record held by four of America's stars by one stroke and captured the medal by a margin of two strokes from her closest competitors, Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, defending champion; Lauren Orcutt, Hawthorth, N. J.; and Helen Hicks of New York, 181 title holder.

The former qualifying low was made by Alexa Stirling Fraser at St. Louis Country Club, 1926; Ada Mackenzie of Toronto, Canadian champion, at Cherry Valley, N. Y., 1927, and by Miss Orcutt and Miss Van Wie, who duplicated the mark with 77s last year at Salem.

The English champion's iron was said to be her record round today. Although she was in trouble at times with her long-range shots, she recovered brilliantly on most instances.

Six birdies and an eagle, scored on the 360-yard 18th hole, where she faced out an 180 yards to within eight feet of the cup, were on her card. Her rounds were 39-37.

Mrs. Leona Cheney of San Gabriel, Cal., another of America's top players, broke the 180-yard mark last attempt of Miss Wilson to win the national title, landing fourth among the leaders with 81.

Lucille Robinson of Des Moines, conqueror of Miss Van Wie in the finals of the 1933 Women's Western, was in safely with an 81 as was Frances Williams, Wayne, star, and Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City.

Charlotte Glutting of Fort Orange, N. Y., who upset Miss Wilson in the quarterfinals at Salem last year, one-up, qualified with a Miss Wilson card with par: Wilson.....555 554 343-39
.....554 445 344-39

GLEDHILL AND VINES LOSE TO FRANK SHIELDS AND PARKER

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 28.—Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill, defending champions in the national doubles tennis play at Longwood, today went down to a 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 3-6, 6-2 defeat under the powerful racquets of Frank X. Shields of New York and his 17-year-old partner, Frankie Parker of Milwaukee.

Vines and Gledhill played brilliantly in spots, but their best was useless against the brilliant Shields, who piled up a total of 31 earned points, including five service aces, to ruin the impressive drive the titlists started after dropping the first two sets.

In the third set, Vines and Gledhill hit up such a terrific pace that the methodical Parker was unable to keep up with them and he failed to score a single point. Shields was as effective as ever, but he needed help to keep the Californians in check.

The champions were able to continue their spurt through the fourth set and square the match. Their power started betraying them. Vines lost control of his first service ball and his poor luck with his terrific drives forced him to slow down to Parker's speed.

The youngsters were superb in the finale, almost as impressive as Shields, and they routed the defenders by breaking down Gledhill's service in the third game, during which the Santa Barbara player drove three balls outside of the court.

Between them Shields and Parker piled up 55 earned points, including the amazing total of 11 service aces, and held their errors down to 92.

Vines and Gledhill had 54 earned points, 24 of which were contributed by the singles champion, and 92 errors.

Woman Fights Five Youths Who Rob Shop of $25.

Alone in a candy shop at 4501 South Kingshighway yesterday when five young robbers entered, Miss Catherine Dohm, the clerk, grappled with their leader and sought to wrest from him a weapon which may have been a toy revolver.

The youth snatched the trigger several times, but there was no explosion. During the struggle one of the robbers opened the cash register and took $25. The five fled in an automobile. Miss Dohm, 19 years old, lives at 5110 Dresden avenue.

Three men, one armed with a shotgun, the other two with pistols, entered the lobby of the Park Plaza Hotel about 3:30 a. m. and demanded that Floyd Wachter, the night clerk, open the cash drawer. It was locked and Wachter had no key. They ran out when one of their number had tried and failed to open the drawer.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 28.—Police stationed a guard today in front of the hotel where Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife are staying, and the men assigned to this duty had plenty of work keeping back a crowd of young autograph hunters and others.

The rooms occupied by the Lindberghs, who arrived Saturday after completing a flight over the North Atlantic route by stages from the United States, also were guarded. So many letters and telegrams had piled up for the Lindberghs this morning that merely to read them all would take a day or two. The messages included a large number from the United States sent by way of the American Legation.

When he left his hotel this morning autograph hunters pushed past the police guard, but Lindbergh, too quick for them, managed to reach his car and get away. He drove to the naval airplane station where he examined his plane carefully. It was reported that the plane would be thoroughly overhauled, as the Lindberghs have flown more than 8000 miles since they left the United States.

The flyer's wife received a gift from the royal porcelain factory—a beautiful porcelain stand showing two dogs at the landing wheels of an airplane.

PARI, Aug. 28.—Grave fear of new devaluation of the French franc has been revived in financial circles here by the downward slide of the dollar and the pound and concern over possible monetary developments in the United States.

The Treasury and the Bank of France still vigorously proclaim that France is firmly on gold, but privately many financiers predict the day is approaching when France will be forced to devalue to revive crippled business and vanishing foreign trade.

Budget Minister Lucien Lamoureux solemnly pictured a perilous state of the nation's finances in a speech at Boussac yesterday. He warned the country that not only the present Cabinet but even the French form of government would be in danger unless France succeeds in the tremendous task of balancing the 1933 and 1934 budgets.

The Budget Minister announced that immediate new economies amounting to 1,600,000,000 francs will be proposed in Parliament, while the country also will be asked to make "new efforts" which he hoped it would accept "with courage."

Two Reported at 5.68 Cents.

(At the close of the unofficial market in Paris Saturday the franc was quoted at 5.68 cents.)

The 1933 deficit, M. Lamoureux pointed out, is 3,600,000,000 francs, and the deficit for 1934 is roughly estimated at six billion francs in overdue payments on Government loans which, if unpaid, would threaten loss of public confidence.

"In which case," he declared, "we would be exposed to dangers so formidable as to endanger the fate of the regime itself."

Deputy Adrien Marguet echoed the same warning at a Socialist manifestation at Angoulême. He asserted the democratic force of government was imperiled and concluded: "France must not know devaluation."

What Daladier Faces.

Premier Daladier will thus be caught between the vital need of reducing expenses and danger of overthrow when he asks Parliament to reduce salaries of Government functionaries as the principal available source of economy.

A cloud of a 50,000,000-franc floating debt hangs over the Ministry of Finance and in the cash box for months there often has been only a small balance.

The unbalanced budget made it certain money must be borrowed for current expenses. This was done in March at 4 1/2 per cent with bonds sold at 98 1/2. Toward the end of April more money was needed and the chances for a successful loan here seemed so poor the Government borrowed $30,000,000 in London.

Financial Experts' View.

The danger to the franc, financial experts assert, lies in the combination of the Government's need of money and the chance the need will be increased rapidly by falling receipts. Taxation of business has yielded less than estimated as cheaper dollars and pounds have caused French exports to diminish steadily while imports increased.

Senator Henri Cheron, former Minister of Finance, has called for "full powers" for the Government, something akin to a dictatorship, to put its financial house in order so as to avoid necessity of inflation.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—Count Michizane Ryoshima of Tokyo said in an interview yesterday that "the growth of the United States Navy is becoming a menace to the peace of the world." The Count, a former member of the House of Peers, here after attending the Institute of Pacific Relations at Banff, Alberta, added:

"The fact that her Atlantic fleet is in the Pacific Ocean is causing ill feeling in Japan. If the United States would remove her navy and repeal the Japanese exclusion act, it would do much to disarm the minds of the people of Japan."

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 28.—Police stationed a guard today in front of the hotel where Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife are staying, and the men assigned to this duty had plenty of work keeping back a crowd of young autograph hunters and others.

The rooms occupied by the Lindberghs, who arrived Saturday after completing a flight over the North Atlantic route by stages from the United States, also were guarded. So many letters and telegrams had piled up for the Lindberghs this morning that merely to read them all would take a day or two. The messages included a large number from the United States sent by way of the American Legation.

When he left his hotel this morning autograph hunters pushed past the police guard, but Lindbergh, too quick for them, managed to reach his car and get away. He drove to the naval airplane station where he examined his plane carefully. It was reported that the plane would be thoroughly overhauled, as the Lindberghs have flown more than 8000 miles since they left the United States.

The flyer's wife received a gift from the royal porcelain factory—a beautiful porcelain stand showing two dogs at the landing wheels of an airplane.

Fear of New Devaluation of Franc Is Revived as Dollar and Pound Slide Downward.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, Aug. 28.—Grave fear of new devaluation of the French franc has been revived in financial circles here by the downward slide of the dollar and the pound and concern over possible monetary developments in the United States.

The Treasury and the Bank of France still vigorously proclaim that France is firmly on gold, but privately many financiers predict the day is approaching when France will be forced to devalue to revive crippled business and vanishing foreign trade.

Budget Minister Lucien Lamoureux solemnly pictured a perilous state of the nation's finances in a speech at Boussac yesterday.
He warned the country that not only the present Cabinet but even the French form of government would be in danger unless France succeeds in the tremendous task of balancing the 1933 and 1934 budgets.

The Budget Minister announced that immediate new economies amounting to 1,000,000,000 francs will be proposed in Parliament, while the country also will be asked to make "new efforts" which he hoped it would accept "with courage."

Franc Reported at 5.68 Cent.
(At the close of the unofficial market in Paris Saturday the franc was quoted at 5.68 cents.)
The 1933 deficit, M. Lamoureux pointed out, is 8,000,000,000 francs, and the deficit for 1934 is roughly estimated at six billion francs in overdue payments on Government loans which, if unpaid, would threaten loss of public confidence.

"In which case," he declared, "we would be exposed to dangers so formidable as to endanger the fate of the regime itself."
Deputy Adrien Marquet echoed the same warning at a Socialist manifestation at Angoulême. He asserted the democratic force of government was imperiled and concluded: "France must not know devaluation."

Financial Experts' View.
The danger to the franc, financial experts assert, lies in the combination of the Government's need of money and the chance the need will be increased rapidly by falling receipts. Taxation has yielded less than estimated as cheaper dollars and pounds have caused French exports to diminish steadily while imports increased.

Senator Henri Chéron, former Minister of Finance, has called for "full powers" for the Government, something akin to a dictatorship, to put its financial house in order
so as to avoid necessity of inflation.

JAPANESE SLAYERS SEEK TO JUSTIFY KILLING OF PREMIER

Defense Cites "Social Cam-

U. S. Ambassador Castle.

By the Associated Press.
TOKIO, Aug. 28.—The State hearings today in the court-martial at Yokosuka naval base of 11 officers charged with participation in the assassination last May of Premier Inukai and accompanying acts of terrorism.

Defense attorneys argued that American support of the Japanese naval treaty justified the young Japanese leaders' acceptance of the treaty constituted a national betrayal. The defense contended over this "national betrayal" that the "patriotic crimes," attorneys offered as evidence a copy of the telegraphic minutes of the American-Soviet Foreign Relations Committee debate concerning the treaty in 1930.

It was maintained that arguments of American supporters of the treaty proved the righteousness of the Japanese antagonists to it.
Attorneys cited what they described as the social campaign of William R. Castle Jr., then Acting American Ambassador, and Mrs.
Castle among highly-placed Japanese in Tokyo three years ago as an example of how Japanese civilian authorities succumbed to "American diplomatic blandishments."

Lieut. Hiroshi Yamaguchi, the last of the accused to testify, dramatically concluded with the argument that Japanese naval leaders had the right to obtain all the strength they deemed necessary for the safety of the Empire and that they must never be limited by civilian authorities.

10 CUBAN MURDER VICTIMS FOUND BURIED AT HAVANA

Men Thought to Have Been Killed by Army Lieutenant After Abortive Revolution of 1931.

By the Associated Press.
HAVANA, Aug. 28.—Members of the A B C Secret Society found the bodies of 10 men, thought by authorities to have been killed by the Army Lieutenant Diaz Diaz after an abortive revolution in August 1931, while digging in the banks of Lake Piedra, near Havana, late yesterday.

Two skeletons were identified as those of Dr. Andres Baez and Jose Hernandez, prominent members of a group opposing the Government of former President Macchado.

Diaz Diaz was killed in May, 1932, by a bomb received in a registered mail package. Four men held in connection with his death were later killed by a military guard.

Two men were killed and four wounded last night in a shooting said to have started because of differences between two groups of workers.

Workers on the Cuba and Northwestern Railway agreed at Camaguey to return to work today after striking for nearly four weeks. Definite solution of their demands was postponed 15 days, during which time consideration will be given to their request for the March, 1930, pay levels.

Scores of minor strikes through-

SAILORS PATROL ST. PIERRE AFTER WEEK'S TAX RIOTS

By the Associated Press.
ST. PIERRE AND MIQUELON,
Aug. 28.—Sailors from two French warships patrolled the streets of St.
Pierre, the capital, today after a week of intermittent tax rioting.

Leaders of the protest movement said they expected word momentar-ly from Paris that Gov. Barriol, whose administration they charge with "scandalous waste of funds," has been recalled. Order came from Paris last night directing the release of rioters arrested by the naval force.

The outbreaks began a week ago when a crowd gathered outside the Government building to demand that the officials return to France.
The next day four persons were arrested, but the crowd stormed the jail and freed them.

FRENCH PREMIER PROCLAIMS INTENT TO GUARD AUSTRIA

Nation Is Determined to Guarantee Other's Political and Economic Dependence, Daladier Says.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, Aug. 28.—France's resolution to guarantee the political and economic independence of Austria was proclaimed by Premier Edouard Daladier as he departed yesterday to inspect $100,000,000 worth of new fortifications on the German frontier.

Although France wishes only peace and intends to pursue a policy of international co-operation, the Premier declared, it is a duty "to assure our own liberty which will be better respected when it is known we are capable of guaranteeing it."

"We must also be on guard," he said, "to see that decisions of the regular organs of European life
the League of Nations and the Hague Court of Arbitration—are observed and maintained."

"They have notably proclaimed and defined the political and economic independence of Austria. We are resolved to guarantee it."

Word for Smaller Powers.
The smaller, weaker and less populous states have the same rights to free life as those of larger population and area.

The statement was made public just before M. Daladier set out by airplane to Metz for an inspection of the steel and concrete defense chain which has been built in the last three years.

Based on France's war experiences, this trench-and-casemate system extends along a 125-mile front between the Rhine and Luxembourg.

It is so constructed that troops would be hidden from enemy view and well protected by the fortifications against bombardment. Trenches link a series of casemates—shell-proof vaults with embrasures through which artillery and machine guns may be fired—from one to 16 miles apart. From this chain, which includes an elaborate system of subterranean barracks connected by tunnels, army officers believe a continuous barrage could be laid down along the frontier.

Design of New Fortifications.
The new fortifications have been designed to offset the shorter period of army service, and Premier Daladier, who is also Minister of War, has assured the nation that there will be budgetary saving in the cost of materials and increasing efficiency through reorganization, without sacrificing man power.

Year of war within several weeks if Fascist control should spread to Austria was raised by Deputies speaking at Angoulême at a meeting of Socialists, who support the Government.

Barthelemy Montagnon said the present regime in Italy, Germany and Hungary "represents oppression of the proletariat, blood and tears in several of our countries."
M. Marquet made this declaration:

"If in several weeks the Hitlerite movement gains ascendancy in Vienna it must be recalled that there will be a game of war there."

Deputy Pierre Renaudel threatened that Socialists would withdraw support from Daladier unless the Government pursues "a strong foreign policy."

Experts Convinced That

By H. ELLWOOD DOUGLASS,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

NEVER have physicians more violently gone against their own "preaching"—lots of rest and nourishing food—than in the quest for the cause of the "sleeping sickness" outbreak in St. Louis and St.
Louis County.

Outstanding Government experts, distinguished local practitioners, noted scientists on the research staffs of both the St. Louis medical schools, are eating and sleeping when, where and if they have time in their concerted drive on one of the least understood of all diseases.

A famous epidemiologist of the United States Public Health Service pauses in midflight between a pin-studded map and a stack of records, which he has been shuf-fling on a Health Department window sill rather than take time to clear a desk. "Tonight," he tells a health officer, "I'm going to look into the possibility of..."

"But when are you going to sleep?" asks his associate. The scientist grins. He doesn't know and apparently doesn't care. "When do you sleep?" he asks.

Four Hours for Sleep.
"I get mine between 2 and 6 in the morning," the other replies, as though doctor's orders were four hours instead of eight. He is an executive, officially concerned only with gathering in the various threads of specialized research.

Every phase is ably handled by local, state and Federal experts in that particular line, but the executive rises at 6, sees patients at 7:30, has his secretary set out lunch, if any, in his office, spends the evening reading up on every related factor, and the last hour turning over and over in his mind every bit of evidence for and against each theory on the unknown factors of this disease.

And the important factors are unknown—cause, specific means of preventive, mode of transmission.
There has been little past opportunity to search for them. Though encephalitis records cover centuries, the outbreak here seems to be a new form, unique in previous experience.

Since then Dr. Leake has been joined by two associates, a noted pathologist and an expert on disease-bearing insects. They were Dr.
Charles Armstrong, director of sleeping sickness research at Washington, and a former president of the American Epidemiological Society, and Dr. L. L. Williams Jr., a physician specializing in mosquito control.

Dr. E. K. Musson, arrived with Dr.
Leake, and other Public Health Service experts will be called on whenever the quest demands specialized knowledge in their particular line.

University experts were formally drafted in the first organization meeting of the Metropolitan Health Council, but informally they had been neck-deep in the fight from its beginning. Faculty members on the staff of the St. Louis University group of hospitals are making clinical studies and supervising the collection of material for study in the hospital laboratories.

The central epidemic laboratory at Washington University, where local and Government scientists are collaborating.

Health Commissioner Bredeck
beginning in the field, probably will lead him into the laboratory. Recalled from his vacation by Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cumming,
he arrived last Friday.

His first step is a sort of bird's eye survey of topography, to map
out features of significance in the habits of disease-bearing insects.
His experience has equipped him
to recognize at a glance the sort of terrain where they are likely to be found.

The quest begins with the study

Dr. Williams' phase of the search, beginning in the field, probably will lead him into the laboratory. Recalled from his vacation by Sur-

he arrived last Friday.

His first step is a sort of bird's
eye survey of topography, to map
out features of significance in the
habits of disease-bearing insects.
His experience has equipped him
to recognize at a glance the sort of terrain where they are likely to be found.

In such surroundings he will search for the insects. Finding mosquitoes of species likely to carry disease, he will go into the laboratory to determine if they are actually infected. If he finds an infection in an insect, the investigation may entail the breeding of thousands of that species for microscopic examination and test of ability to transmit the infection.

HITLER ASSERTS GERMANY WON'T GIVE UP THE SAAR

Tells Crowd of 200,000 Nation Does Not Want New War but Treaties Must Bind Opponents.

HINDENBURG REFERS TO KAISER AND LORD

Places Wreath at Tannenberg in Memory of Fallen Soldiers and Accepts Forest Estate.

By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Cancellor Hitler declared in a speech yesterday that Germany, though not desiring a new war, would never give up its claims to the Saar basin.

At another gathering, President von Hindenburg made what was considered a significant reference to his "Kaiser the King and Lord." This was interpreted as forecasting a restoration of the monarchy.

Von Hindenburg made his declaration when he accepted the gift of a forest from East Prussia. The estate is near his ancestral home at Neudeck.

Hitler flew to both gatherings about 100 miles apart—the first concentration at Niederwald Mountain near the southwestern border, and exercises for Von Hindenburg at Tannenberg, near the eastern extremity.

Representatives of the old army in uniforms, an honor company of the standing army, brown-shirted attendants, coal miners, farmers and others—nodded knowingly as Hindenburg said:

"I am thinking with reverence, fidelity and gratitude of my Kaiser, the King and Lord, in this hour, when I am thinking also of my deceased comrades in arms, and when I proceed to thank you for the gift."

He deposited a wreath in memory of his fallen comrades commemorating his victory at Tannenberg over Russian forces in the World War.

Automobile clubs throughout Germany arranged a tour to East Prussia through the Polish territory that separates it from the rest of the Reich to assure the East Prussians that they intend to stand by the province.

At Niederwald Mountain Hitler predicted that in 1935 Saar residents would be asked to rejoin the Fatherland. Under League of Nations control, they will determine whether to remain a semi-autonomous state, become a part of France or rejoin Germany.

"They lie when they say the German people are being terrorized," Hitler said to an audience of 200-000.

"I am willing to appeal to the electorate and am confident five-sixths will back our program."
"We do not want a new war, but if holy treaties are binding, they must bind our opponents as well as ourselves. We demand an understanding with France, but will never abandon the Saar."

Hitler made a brief landing at tempelhof Airfield here to greet pilots who have engaged in a three-day around Germany race.
He attacked foreign allegations that terror is ruling Germany.

"It is not terror—it is fate," he said. "Germany has re-erisen. We have liberated Germany from the terror of those who did not want a strong Germany."
"Many people abroad still fail to understand that Socialism and Nationalism have become one here, Whom God joined let no man su-dar."

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in the cardinal principles that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the rights of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong; whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Thoughts on the Roosevelt Program.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

NOW the citrus growers are going to restrict production, although a knowledge of a 10-year-old boy can absorb a pack of oranges a day without apparent injury. The per capita consumption of oranges is what? One a day?

Oil production curtailed. Wheat production curtailed. Butter and cheese, milk and schmierke restricted. Broad sows massacred to make an NRA holiday.

All this is contemplated to raise earnings and make it possible for people who are doing without to have more gas, cheese and pork chops.

But what about the unemployed cotton pickers, and the laid-off orange packers? The oil drillers' families will no doubt spend a well-earned vacation in Spain. The hog callers will dash over to Manhattan and visit the emptiest building in the world. The milking machine operators (field off) will fill the tank of the old larder with air and vacation with the printers, lithographers, can and carton makers who are not needed because of the universal decrease of package goods.

The way to cure the depression seems to be this: Stop producing because purchasing has stopped. Lay off workers because production is not needed. Decrease volume. That's all. Decrease volume. This will require less labor. Cut the hours of labor so the lessened labor will be thinly spread among the laborers, so there will be at least one bread winner in every family by which to raise wages. Raise prices. (The mule with the wisp of hay suspended before his nose.)

These things are just as apparent to Mr. Roosevelt as they are to you and me. He is doing a wonderful piece of business. He is letting the managers of the old order attempt to repair their own machine. "Put your house in order!" sez he.

There is a gallery of some hundred millions of people looking on, and obeying orders. If the machine can be fixed up, O. K. The common people are doing their part. They have been heretofore. They have learned to live on what a few men throw away. One hundred thousand St. Louis people survive on a dose of $20 a month per family. With plenty of time to sleep, they don't need to eat or wear out clothes. Everything is all right. It is only temporary, so it's all right.

NIRA sounds like new era. We are as perplexed as Eve was when she had the first baby that was ever born. She didn't have a mother to tell her what it was all about. We are seeing a new social order aborning. The agony is not fatal. The outcome is glorious.

A jamboree of producing—a jubilee of consuming, just as soon as the wheels are permitted to have been succeeded by the winning program of economic reconstruction. There is plenty of brain power. The orchestra is only tuning up now. It sounds like hell. Shorten the bacon will tap and the harmony pour forth.

FRANK P. O'HARE.

Give the Landlords a Chance.

TO the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
NOW that prices on all commodities are increasing and salaries as well as employment are also on the upward grade, I think it is time the landlords, who have been so bravely bearing the brunt of the situation, have their day.

What is the matter with increasing the rentals of those who during the so-called depression have been paying ridiculously low rents and riding in the latest models of automobiles at the expense of the landlords? Come on, landlords, wake up and get together, don't let them laugh at you any longer.

A VICTIM.

What to Do About Nurses.

TO the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
HEAT recent letter—about the plight of nurses—didn't say half enough. Nurses need more than a code. They must first have a square deal and co-operation from the hospitals and doctors. Almost without exception, in hospitals in this city the work is done by student nurses getting from $5 to $12 per month, or by nurses who receive no pay. Although there has been an over-supply of nurses for years, the hospitals continue to enlarge their student classes because it means cheap labor for the hospital. Other professions have been taking on but few apprentices—and will somewhat balance their former overcrowded fields. But the nursing field is still overcrowded and underpaid. Fifty cents an hour and a 12-hour day! Even the building trades laborer gets 75 cents an hour, and plumbers, electricians and others as much as $1.50. Their work is no more seasonal than the nurses'.

For the foregoing, there is a remedy much simpler than Gen. Johnson has. Reduce the student-nurse enrollment by half. Employ a graduate nurse to every four to six patients in hospitals. Shorten hours to 10 or even eight for both floor duty and special duty. Only the critically ill need constant attendance. Eliminate the charge of $1.50 a day for nurses' board. This is almost clear profit for the hospital. Let nurses pay for their own meals. Use nurses for floor duty in religious hospitals. And stop juggling books to show a continued deficit.

There is something wrong somewhere. The student nurse costs a little—hope they pay no taxes—yet they always say they make no money.

THE CONSUMER AND THE RETAIL CODE.

A code which will affect the consumer more directly than any other is the one submitted by six national retail associations and now pending before the NRA.

From the consumer's point of view, the most important provision of this code is the one which would make it an unfair method of competition for any merchant to sell any merchandise at less than cost plus 10 per cent. The code further forbids merchants to make any reference in their advertising to the goods, services or prices of their competitors or to make any claim that they generally undersell their competitors. Such advertising is outlawed as unfair, along with that which deliberately misrepresents merchandise, values or services. The code provides for the creation of local committees or retailers to carry out its purposes.

The vocal majority of the trades involved supports these provisions, denouncing any and all price cutting as a "predatory," "destructive," "ruthless," "cut-throat" policy of "dog eat dog." The price cutter, it is argued, precipitates a price war. Prices were necessarily impaired trade standards. The fighting competitor is forced to lower quality, to misrepresent goods and services, to exploit labor by lengthening hours and lowering wages. The weakest are driven into bankruptcy. Prices were thus increased unemployment. To permit a competitor to cut prices, therefore, would defeat NIRA's purpose of raising wages, lowering hours and reducing unemployment. Price-fixing, contend the retailers, is essential to the successful prosecution of the recovery program.

The weakness of this argument is that it assumes that no merchant can undersell another unless he exploits labor or lies to the consumer. This is not true. A merchant may be able to undersell if he keeps his overhead low by maintaining a less elaborate place of business in a less expensive location; if he offers less in the way of service, making no deliveries, accepting no returned merchandise, selling nothing on credit. Or he may lower costs by increasing managerial efficiency. The proposed code would deny to such a merchant the right to translate his lower costs into lower prices; to inform the consumer that he is competing for trade on a price rather than a service basis. It would make it impossible for the consumer to stretch his market dollar by resorting to stores in inferior locations which offered him less in the way of service.

The local retailer committee set up by the code would have the power to discipline every merchant in the community. He would be permitted to offer better quality or more service for the same price. He would not be permitted to offer the same quality or service, or even the same quality and inferior service, at a lower price. This committee would, in effect, be granted monopoly power. But it would be purely a committee of business men. It would include in its membership no representative of labor, no representative of the consumer.

We do not believe that the Recovery Act contemplated anything of this sort. Indeed, the retail groups concerned have effectively protested against granting to manufacturers the very price-fixing powers which they are now asking for themselves. The logic of their position is less than defensible. If they can be permitted under the NIRA to fix a minimum price of cost plus 10 per cent, they can equally well be permitted to set their prices at cost plus 15 or 20 or 30 per cent. And they can then petition the Government to shut up any store which violates the code by selling for less. If it is against social policy to grant this power to manufacturers, it is equally against social policy to grant it to retailers.

With the announced purpose of outlawing misrepresentation in advertising we are thoroughly in sympathy, although it scarcely seems necessary to write into the code provisions which are already adequately covered by law. With the purpose of preventing underselling by stretching hours or reducing wages we are equally in sympathy. This is properly defined as chiseling, and it is the purpose of NIRA to make such practices impossible.

But the merchant who faithfully observes the wage and hour provisions of the code; who truthfully represents his goods and his services to consumers; and who is still able, through superior efficiency or simpler selling methods, to sell his merchandise at a lower price, has a perfect right under the law to do so. To define such competition as chiseling would be destructive of the meaning which the word has come to convey. To compel the Government to suppress honest competition would be completely to ignore the interest of the consumer.

AS BISHOP CANNON SAILS.

The Cassandra of prohibition—and what a lot of them there are!—have been sternly rebuked. Sitting dejectedly amid their Trojan ruins, they have mostly quit. Puffyfoot Johnson, the gayest missionary of them all, who saw in his expansive dreams the whole world on the water wagon, has removed the white ribbon and seems disposed to twine garlands in his hair. That evangelist of the sawdust trail has gone back, as he says, "to his old love, the gospel," and will thunder no more against the Demon Rum. A lesser figure in the drama but as fervid in the faith as any of them, our own Missouri Drago, who prepared the text of our bone-dry law, has mournfully acknowledged "the eighteenth amendment is doomed."

But out from the discomfited litter and sullen debris of a lost cause comes a volley of bugled defiance, a rallying cry, a clarion call. Bishop Cannon speaking. "No retreat. No surrender. No compromise." That is his valiant message as he boards the ship for Europe. Spoken like a warrior.

It has been our privilege, following this churchman's journeying through non-spiritual affairs, to remark the energy of his political endeavors and to applaud his plumb and daring in the raveling jungle of Wall Street. And this farewell fighting message moves us to wish the Bishop, without quibble or reservation, a bon voyage!

AMBULANCE SERVICE IN THE COUNTY.

Next Thursday the St. Louis County Court will take up the question of ambulance service for the County Hospital and the Health Department. At present, the service is furnished by undertakers, who receive compensation at the rate of $3.50 a trip, a system adopted when undertakers complained of the practice of permitting Louis Bopp, Kirkwood undertaker, to furnish service for the entire county without any charge. Certainly, that was objectionable and so, we believe, is the fee system.

One undertaker, George Hoffmeister, says he would like to see the hospital purchase an ambulance and give its own service, "so that patients would not be compromised by any undertakers." That, it seems to us, is what the county should do. At the rate of $2.50 a trip, the county has already been charged with $507.50 this month for 145 calls. This large number is partly attributable to the sleeping sickness epidemic. In normal months, however, ambulance service costs the county about $300.

A publicly-owned ambulance should pay for itself in time, but even if it did not, the sending of ambulances for emergency cases is properly a function of the St. Louis County Hospital and should not be delegated to undertakers.

MR. DARROW AGAIN AT BAT.

Back in his old home town in Ohio, which made his visit a gala occasion, Clarence Darrow talked about economics. He can't see how we're going to retrieve prosperity by curtailing production. He thinks it an "utter absurdity" to pay a farmer for growing less wheat and a planter for reducing his cotton acreage. "The world," he says, "won't have too much until no one is starving, no one is in want." We can all say amen to that last sentence.

How we are going to beat back to plenty by restricting production is a paradox that baffles most of us; just as it does Mr. Darrow. "It's a mad world, my masters," as well as a sad one. So many dogmas that were handed down to us and accepted as eternal verities have been bashed in the head that, generally speaking, homo sapiens is out on a limb.

Still, illness requires special treatment which would be preposterous in health. For instance, more than one administrative device has been derisively described as "a shot in the arm." But how often has a patient been tided over a crisis by a "shot in the arm"? How many persons are alive and vigorous today, who, if it hadn't been for a knife, or a needed jolt of strychnine, or some drastic resort, would long ago have been ferried across the Styx? Well, here's a planet economically sick, with a lingering malady that has baffled the diagnosticians and has stubbornly refused to yield to the pills or powders of the old school of medicine. Anyhow, we have a doctor now with a cheerful bedside manner, who is not afraid to try new remedies. And though it may be a long road to recovery, the patient does seem to be perking up.

Now let us look at Clarence Darrow. A kindly old philosopher, a rattling good lawyer in his special field, an essayist of parts, a friend of man, we believe, who can make as dull rambling and repetitious a speech as mortal tongue ever unwound, and, somehow or other, get away with it. There is a great store of wisdom in his fine old head, but he, too, can err. Prohibition, for example. His contempt for that sumptuary blunder was superb. He arraigned the folly of it on all the fronts, with voice and pen. Yet he knew the eighteenth amendment could never be repealed, knew it was imbedded in the Constitution forever and ever, knew that the only solution was repudiation, which public opinion, he knew, would ultimately sanction. He knew what wasn't so, and delivered the verdict as a royal phase. And if he could be so magnificently mistaken in the area of politics, with which he is so familiar, is it not possible that he might go as far astray in the terra cognita of economics?

It strikes us that Mr. Darrow, after doing the Mighty Casey in the prohibition pincch, might drop his cocksureness and march along with the rest of us in the procession of hope.

PRESERVING THE WISCONSIN TRADITION.

The opposition of the Post-Dispatch to compulsory military training in educational institutions is a matter of record. It is gratifying to us, therefore, to learn that Gov. Schmedeman of Wisconsin has vetoed a bill which would have repealed Wisconsin's optional military training statute. This statute, which now continues in force, was passed in 1922. It set the University of Wisconsin apart among land-grant institutions. Previously, all colleges and institutions which received Federal land under the Morrill Act had required their male students to complete a two-year course in military drill and tactics.

A stirring debate was precipitated between educators who regard military training as a useless consumption of valuable time and those who see no harm in requiring students to submit to a program which many of them find not only uninteresting but distasteful. Time and the law, however, were on the side of the University of Wisconsin. Three years ago, Attorney-General Mitchell cleared the air by ruling that the Federal law did not require the training to be mandatory, only that it be offered for those who desired such instruction.

The University of Wisconsin has an enviable reputation for its enlightened educational policies. The Wisconsin Legislature should seek to preserve that reputation. Gov. Schmedeman's action is a reminder to that end.

BENEFITS OF FORESTRY CAMPS.

The public has been so favorably impressed by the Civilian Conservation Corps program that President Roosevelt's action in authorizing new six-month enlistments for the forestry workers will be generally approved. The effect of taking $14,000 men into these camps has been widely felt in the labor markets and relief rolls of the country. Even more impressive has been the improved morale of the forestry workers. Lifted from the depressing atmosphere of long unemployment and need, they have been provided with an occupation and earnings for themselves and their families. The improvement in their physical and spiritual health has been noted by every observer.

From the forester's and conservationist's viewpoint, great benefits have been produced, as well. The nation's first experiment in a wide program of forest planning and culture, so long neglected, has been voted a success by experts in the field. Inexperienced at the outset, the men have learned the rudiments of forestry, and have accomplished much necessary work. E. W. Tinker, a regional forester in the Federal service, writes in the Forestry News Digest that, through the C. C. C. program, "the practice of forestry has assumed a new aspect." He adds: "One thing surely should result from the President's program—clear recognition that forestry offers a new and profitable source for the use of labor."

The country would be remiss in its obligation to conserve its natural resources if it dropped the forestry activities with the end of the emergency. Forest conservation should be a continuing work, for it offers rich returns for the outlay involved. The present workers are receiving training in the science of forestry, and the services of all or a large part of them might well be continued in a permanent program of reforestation.

A REAL CAP FOR THE OIL WASTE.

Reforming U. S. Employment Service

Public employment offices in past have played little part in organizing labor market; under Wagner Act, creating nation-wide system, Secretary Perkins hopes to build efficient program; need for it never greater than at present, she says, in helping get men back to work; she plans also to found a broad permanent establishment.

Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, in the Bulletin of National Industrial Conference Board.

THE United States has lagged behind a number of European countries in establishment of a nation-wide system of public employment offices. As a consequence, our service to both employers and employees has been left quite largely to private initiative. This has meant a heterogeneous collection of employment offices, ranging from fee agencies to the recent effective demonstration centers which render a free service to both employers and employees. Philanthropic bodies frequently maintain employment services; so do employer and employee organizations. In the field of public employment offices, municipal agencies are the most numerous. These state funds, on the whole, employers, workers and others have not looked upon the public employment offices as an important element in our industrial organization. Funds have not been able to secure Federal funds otherwise. However, the attitude of the states is now maintaining offices, as expressed in the passage of the act and in recent conferences held in Washington, has been most encouraging.

No state will be forced to comply in order to maintain employment offices, but it will not be able to secure Federal funds otherwise. However, the attitude of the states is now maintaining offices, as expressed in the passage of the act and in recent conferences held in Washington, has been most encouraging.

A wise provision of the Wagner Act requires the establishment of a Federal Advisory Council, made up of men and women representing employers and employees in equal numbers and the public, for the special purpose of "formulating policies and discussing problems relating to employment and insuring impartiality, neutrality and freedom from political influence in the selection of such problems." Similar councils are required for individual states. Such groups cannot guarantee the quality of the new service, but we do look to them as valuable adjuncts in the total scheme. As implied, employers have a definite responsibility in helping to build a well-functioning employment service. But such an opportunity does not end with assistance given through these councils. We look to them for help also as we move on toward job analysis and occupational classification.

The need for a system of public employment offices has never been greater than in the present situation. Such a system cannot create positions where there are none, but a well-coordinated organization is a most necessary part in the program of national industrial recovery and the return of workers to their positions. There may be dangers of this emergency phase overshadowing the more permanent structure in the mind of the public, since one of the first and most pressing demands made on our service is that in connection with the public works program. However, we ourselves do not lose sight of our more permanent plans and we hope that the temporary measures will lead on into the permanent.

We realize there are many serious problems to be solved as we move forward, but there can be no question of the worth of the joint undertaking. Because it is both serious and important, I ask the co-operation of employers, of both organized and unorganized workers, of agencies of public information and of social service in building up and using this system.

Liquor Control in Missouri

From the Kansas City Times.

WITH repeal of the eighteenth amendment in sight, in the opinion of competent authorities, both wet and dry, Missouri may be without any legal regulation of the liquor traffic once repeal is effected, unless in the meantime a system of control shall have been provided by the Legislature. If these authorities are right, then there would be nothing to prevent the opening of saloons throughout the State after repeal, unless a regulatory law is enacted.

Both parties are pledged to prevent the return of the saloon. In keeping of these pledges, there is common ground on which both wets and dries can and should meet. With the sale of liquors made legal, the purpose should be to minimize the evils of dispensing them.

Along with the public and many organizations identified with the liquor question, the beer interests are against the open saloon. These interests have no desire to add the saloon to their already almost unlimited outlets for legalized beer. They are making an united effort to prevent the association of beer and hard liquor, an association that involved heavy license costs, political tribute and expensive competitive practices in the old days.

The principle of local option has been accepted in the State, and should be applied to the new regime, although it will not be so effective in the days of the motor car and the hard surface road as it was in the days of the horse-drawn wagon. But local option alone will not be enough.

Missouri needs to consider the various plans adopted elsewhere to minimize the evils growing out of private profit from the liquor traffic. The various Canadian systems of state liquor monopoly, and the Bratt system of Sweden, with a private monopoly with restricted profits, call for thorough consideration. Gov. Park has appointed a committee to study these methods and to consider whether some of them cannot be adapted to the needs of Missouri.

This committee should be ready with its report when the Legislature assembles in the special session that is to be called to deal with emergency State problems this fall.

THE DUTY OF BUSINESS.

From the Living Age.
HARRY ARTHUR HOPF, president of H. A. Hopf & Co., management engineers of New York City, expressed the views of many business leaders when he told the National Office Management Association at its fourteenth annual convention that business management is under an "imperative obligation to follow President Roosevelt's leadership in adapting old methods to fit a new order, an order in which business will thrive because those who make business possible are fairly and intelligently treated by business." Mr. Hopf then drew these lessons from the depression:

"If the depression has taught us one truth, it has taught us, painfully, that prosperity is dependent upon stability of income, stability of employment, and satisfaction of the needs of the great mass of the working classes. Unless management satisfies these necessities, it will do so involuntarily. 'Already' we are faced with social and industrial legislation which three years ago we should have regarded as impossible, certainly within a decade or two. If management had squarely and adequately met the responsibilities of its task, such legislation most likely would not be necessary. As it is, enactment of that legislation represents probably the only way to raise conditions as a whole to decent levels."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.
SEVERAL weeks ago the Amalgamated Garment Workers sent organizers to Corinth, Miss. They were to organize textile workers there as a part of the nationwide campaign to unionize the clothing industry under the Recovery Act. Days passed. Nothing was heard from them.

Finally word reached Sidney Hillman, president of the union, that the men had been imprisoned by local authorities as "dangerous Reds." Hillman went to Secretary of Labor Perkins and asked her aid. She promptly got Gov. Conner on the long-distance telephone and briskly called his attention to the fact that there was a Section 7 in the Recovery Act guaranteeing the right of labor to organize for collective bargaining.

Conner assured Miss Perkins that the Amalgamated's organizers would be released. Several days later she received a letter from the local Sheriff apologizing for the arrest. "We thought they were posing as Government agents," he wrote, "and so we picked them up. As soon as we learned they were good union men we let them out at once. We are for President Roosevelt 100 per cent down here and can assure you of our heartiest co-operation." Position Everything.

NEGOTIATIONS with Colombia for a new commercial treaty were held up for 10 days, all because of that highly important factor in politics and diplomacy—rank.

Pomponio Guman, leading Colombian economist, former Minister of Finance, was appointed to conduct the negotiations. He was to have the rank of "Special Minister."

Just as he was about to leave Bogota, however, came a telegram from Washington. It was signed by Don Fabio Lozano, Colombian Minister to the United States. And it objected vigorously to Guman getting the rank of Minister. Guman, shown the telegram, threw up his hands. He refused to come to the United States unless he had the rank of Minister.

So 10 days elapsed while new negotiators willing to come without rank were selected.

Oil Code.

BEHIND the oil code is the story of a bitter and protracted oil war which the code has temporarily abated, but which will cost every automobile owner a good deal. The issue is over the question of price fixing through Government regulation. Clamorously for this are the so-called "independent" oil operators, among them such giants as Harry F. Sinclair, of Teapot Dome notoriety, plus Secretary of Interior Ickes.

The latter had been in office only a few days when he tackled the complex task of trying to introduce order and control in the outburst and chaotic oil industry. Ickes became convinced that the only solution, short of outright Government ownership, was price fixing and regulation of production.

URGES WORLD CREEDS TO 'DEBUNK' RELIGION

Maharajah Gakwar of Baroda is Opening Speaker at Chicago Conference.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Religion needs "debunking" that the modern man may understand it and "debunking" that he may respect it, the Maharajah Gakwar of Baroda yesterday told leaders in religious thought from the five continents at the second World Parliament of Religions.

More than 100 sects of the 11 great creeds were represented at the opening session. The congress will continue for 25 days. The principal theme will be to emphasize the likenesses of all the great faiths in addresses by 200 leaders, including Jagadguru Shri Shankaracharya, head of the Hindu religion. He broke a precedent of 1100 years in being the first Prime Minister of India to leave that country.

The Maharajah Gakwar, 71 years old, a fabulously wealthy Prince, was the first sovereign ruler to visit the Century of Progress.

Ferment and Chaos.

"We are in an age of ferment and chaos, but also of transition and awakening," the Maharajah said. "Science has united the world, but is divided socially, economically and politically. Man can weigh and analyze the farthest planet. Can he organize the one he lives on?"

"I assure you we are not all mystics in India. We have our materialists and many realists. We have no Woolworth towers, we have our Delhi mosques, Kabir, Tukaram and Tulsiadas are given as what I believe you call horse sense and called us back to reality and to human values. They are the practical idealists of India."

The men of science, the doctors, the engineers, the social reformers, the religious sects, these are making things new, but selfishness, race hatred, narrow nationalism and greed have thrown all into chaos.

"Yet a new cosmos is emerging. God is at work. He is a democratic king and asks our help. He recognizes no hierarchy but that of service. Democracy means also the emergence of the common man and his rights, the demand of the backward peoples for a place in the sun. And alike in East and West, tyranny and hubris are challenged for they deny these rights."

"We in Asia see that race prejudice may yet destroy the commonwealth, that caste has been so perverted that it has brought India low."

Challenge to Religion.

"All over the world religion is being challenged by the developers of ethical ideals of mankind. Religion that is unethical is a curse, not a boon. Yet religion is needed and will survive for man is incurably religious. If there were no God, he would invent one."

"Christianity calls men to crucify the lower self. But it is paralyzed by the snobbery and color bar of Christians. It can do much if it recovers its true fundamentals, love of a loving God and love of men who are brothers."

"We in India affirm that all creatures are one, but we have lost our sense of proportion. We spare malarial mosquitoes and plague-bearing rats, but we bear heavily on the human family and do harm to millions of our fellow men. We must pray to be led back from the unreal to the real, from darkness to light, from exaggeration to balance. Our economic and political problems are ethical and spiritual problems."

SCIENTISTS SEARCH FOR THE CAUSE OF SLEEPING SICKNESS

onset of all reported cases is being conducted by the vital statistician, a position in the Health Department. The interval between successive "peaks of incidence" is expected to provide a valuable guide toward the incubation period of the disease.

The trained analyst of figures has many other functions in the quest. At its beginning, Dr. Leake called on her to determine certain norms of seasonal disease prevalence here as a measuring stick for one phase of his investigation. Case histories and the reports of field workers are being tabulated for her analysis, and more than one phase of the laboratory work is expected to demand her experienced scrutiny.

Thus, in effect, every local resource in medicine and related sciences is called on in this dramatic search. Should a virus or a transmission agent be identified, scientists in all parts of the world would get into the investigation, to check and recheck the results toward establishing a dependable means of throttling the disease for all time.

OPERA ATTENDANCE RECORD IS BROKEN

713,807 Persons See 82 Performances at Municipal Theater.

A new record for the Municipal Opera was established when 713,807 persons attended the 82 performances of the fifteenth season which closed last night with the final presentation of "The Desert Song."

The attendance was 41,238 more than last year, when there were 82 performances, and 26,121 more than 1931, when there were 83 performances. The 1931 season had been the high mark in attendance.

Receipts from tickets sales will not be announced until the opera's management said they would approximate the figure for last year, which was $384,632. Receipts did not increase in proportion to attendance because of preference for the cheaper seats.

The most popular attraction of the season was "The Cat and the Fiddle," which drew 67,768 in the eleventh week. Attendance at other presentations:

The Student Prince—67,697.
The Desert Song—64,728.
Rip Van Winkle—65,941.
Naughty Marietta—63,224.
Bitter Sweet—62,365.
Florencia—61,882.
White Lilacs—57,335.
Beau Brummell—53,675.
My Maryland—53,011.
Nina Rosa—51,038.
The Nightingale—43,453.

Reserved seats were occupied by 574,097 persons during the season, and 139,400, or an average of 1700 each night, saw the performances from the free seats. The attendance figures do not take into account those who stood to see the opera on several nights.

While the opera lost $4600 in 1932, it is anticipated there will be a small surplus this year because of lower operating costs. It is hoped the surplus will be sufficient to meet office expenses during the winter months. In previous years funds were borrowed for that purpose.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

MISS JANE FOLK FORDER, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Carver Forder, 7042 Delmar boulevard, has as her guest Miss Laura Louise Eales of Chicago, who returned home with her a few days ago. Miss Forder had been visiting friends in Chicago following a stay in Rye Beach, N. H.

Miss Eales is a former St. Louisan and is the daughter of William Eales, a Chicago engineer. She will remain a week.

Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Moss, 18 Washington terrace, departed Wednesday evening for Eaton's Ranch, Sheridan, Wyo., where she and Mr. Moss have a cottage. She will remain until the end of September.

The Arcadia Valley has long been a summer retreat for St. Louisans. Among those who have maintained homes there is Mrs. Adelaide P. Gay, who has with her at Ironton, Mo., her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tucker Gay, 112 North Benton avenue, and their children, Tucker, Vincent and Barbara.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindell Gordon are at their home, "Topping Hill," at Arcadia for the summer.

Mrs. James A. W. Lewis, 7226 Westmoreland drive, is at her "Ozark Home" at Arcadia, where the Lewis family has been for the last 20 years.

Mrs. William Holmes Thomson, 4905 Argyle place, and her daughter, Miss Mary McCreary Thomson, are spending the latter part of the summer at the "Colonial House," in Arcadia.

Mr. and Mrs. George Clarkson, 4943 Lindell boulevard, has opened her summer home in Arcadia and has her daughter-in-law, Mrs. George Clarkson Jr., 7243 Northmoor, and the latter's children with her.

St. Louisans are taking an active part in the late summer festivities at Hot Springs, Va. The annual water carnival for children attracted many visitors to the Homestead last week, where Leonore and Ricardo Carignani, daughter and son of the Marchessa and Marchessa Giovanni Carignani of Naples, won the novelty diving contest. Helen Wills and John L.
John D. Jr. and Dante.
In Stovepipe Hat.
The Jewish Pageant.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(Copyright, 1933.)
HELEN WILLS defeats Helen Moody at tennis, a feat comparing favorably with that of Joshua stopping the sun in its supposed trip around the earth. John L. Sullivan's defeat by Corbett at New Orleans was like the defeat of Napoleon by Wellington. The real Napoleon was not present at Waterloo, and the real Sullivan was not in the ring with Corbett. Had he been there, Mr. Corbett would not have remained. Sullivan said: "I am glad I was beaten by an American." Helen Wills, specializing a little more, may say: "I am glad I was beaten by a California girl."

John D. Rockefeller Jr., urging Americans to back the NRA, and the President says: "We found ourselves at the cross roads, hesitant and uncertain as to which road to take." Mr. Rockefeller reminds you, without intending it, of the first lines of Dante's inferno. Il mezzo del cammin di Nostra vita.

Il ritrovo per una selva Oscura, che la diretto via era Smarrita. Which mean that Dante, middle-aged when he began his moral work, found himself "in the middle of the road of life," in an obscure forest with the straight road not clear.

Mr. Rockefeller speaks in well-earned praise of President Roosevelt, who, according to Mr. Rockefeller, says: "I do not pretend to know all the roads, but I know something about them. I may take the wrong turnings, and we may have to retrace our steps at times, but if you will trust me and follow me and all keep together, I will lead you out."

Mr. Rockefeller and his assistants, including some of the ablest business men in America, believe that NRA will succeed. That should encourage others.

Five more have recently been beheaded in Germany, the most picturesque executions taking place at Torgau, where a widow, Emma Thieme, was beheaded with two men, who had killed her own son at her request. The executioner cut off each head with only one blow of his ax, and, in accordance with German custom, each sometimes requires statesman to wear "full dress" in the evening. The executioner was adorned with "stovepipe hat" and "swallow tail coat."

It may comfort a ghost, arrived at the other end of the journey, and taunted with being a murderer, to say: "Yes, but my head was cut off by a man with a stovepipe hat." Ghosts from other countries can't say that.

Gov. Lehman of New York and Samuel Untermyer, able lawyer, chairman of a Jewish pageant, "The Romance of a People," to be presented on Sept. 14. You won't see the announcement 62,000 fingers, actors and dancers will portray 4000 years of Jewish history.

Actors, singers and dancers have had little to do with the real great things of the Jewish race, except, perhaps, David, when he danced before the ark. The best Jewish pageant would show Heine writing his poems; Disraeli fighting down the stupid contempt of British Tories, becoming their Prime Minister, and justifying his prediction: "Some day you will listen to me." Disraeli, working through a life of poverty on the largest problems that confront the human intellect; Einstein, greatest of the Jewish scientists, who, if he came back, would write a new 1933 "GUIDE TO THE PERPLEXED," and, possibly, the 800 Jews that died by fire one day refusing to save their lives by denying their religion.

Aviation makes steady progress. Pan-American Airways will spend at once $3,250,000 for bigger, more powerful passenger ships.

Airplane travel now costs 6.1 cents a mile. In 1926 it was 12 cents a mile.

When the Diesel engine airplane perfected, airplane travel at one a mile will show a profit, and it will go from the Atlantic to the Pacific, or from New York to London in one day for $3. Remember the prediction. You will probably have to see it realized.

The Rt. Rev. William Mercer Green, Bishop Coadjutor of the diocese of Southern Mississippi, thinks the country has placed too much confidence in "those from the masses" during the past 200 years and says, "leaders were born, never made."

No worm should argue with a bishop, but it may be pointed out that when the country relied on such samples of "the masses" as

The class in canning is a popular one, and here are Norma Moeskel preparing beans for canning and Ruth Thym putting the fruit into a bottle to be cold packed.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha:
I HAVE been going with a young man off and on for the past five months, and I find him to be quite an enigma, due to the fact that I simply cannot make him out as far as his feelings are concerned. . . . the truth is the matter is, I am afraid he is quite devoid of feelings, although, to be fair, I know he is rather shy. At times he almost comes to a break-down of the barriers, when something within him calls, "Whoa!"—and does he fold up.

I have learned to care for him without any good reason at all to such an extent that I do not care to go with anyone else. I am miserable while I am with him and still more miserable when I am away from him.

His business, I know, has not been very good; he has certain ambitions for establishing himself and he is too proud to get any help from his people for which I respect him all the more. At times I have suspected that one of the reasons for caution on his part might be financial but I wish he would realize that I am not the type needing elaborate or expensive amusements.

I am 24 years old and he is 27, so you see we are not kids. Can you help me make myself wake up? I have heard from several sources that I am the only girl he has been dating.

Five months! The trouble with you and many, many girls who write me, is they give them a little exclusive attention for a few months, then the girls have him all ready in their minds to get married. The boys realize how they feel about it and, being in no condition to marry, financially, and having given no real, serious thought of it, try to tell them the easiest way they can, that they do not want to be tied definitely. They feel the kindest thing, and perhaps the most diplomatic, is to disappear, gradually or suddenly. Even then, the girl usually persists and demands an explanation.

Why are you girls so breathless about jumping into marriage? You know that there are many other things you should do, before you take on this responsibility. You may be prepared—and probably if you are a normal girl, will have other chances. At least, if you think you will not, do not advertise this to the boys and everybody else.

Will the "Girl From Chicago" and other who have written me about their disappointments, in the same circumstances, consider this an answer to all of them?

Dear Mrs. Carr:
WE have three female pups that we would like very much to give to anyone who would give them a good home and be kind to them. One is tan, one tan and brown and one black and white. They are two and a half months old. If you would hear of any person who might want one we would thank you. Phone number is KIRKWOOD 11313.

MRS. O. L. M.

You didn't say what kind of pups they are; but, to a good many people, a pup is just a pup; so I suppose it is all right.

My Dear Mrs. Carr:
HOW does one go about tracing their genealogy? I should like to know my family tree for at least a couple of hundred years. I have gained information concerning the beginning and the end, but can't quite make them meet in the middle. As I live in a small town, I have no access to a library which contains information of the sort. Would the State Lending Library be able to do this for me?

Another, and relative, question is this: What documentary evidence, or proof of ancestry does the D. A. R. require, for eligibility for membership in this organization?

If you know the names of the ancestors who gave their services in the Revolutionary War, or whether or not they were in public service in the country from which they came, a genealogist would probably be able to trace the succeeding generations for you. To be eligible to the D. A. R. you must be descended in direct line from a man who was actively engaged in the Revolutionary War, either as soldier or statesman. Write to the Registrar, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, 1000 Broadway, New York, D. C., or to a State Regent of your State. The Public Lending Library may have something about your ancestor, if he was a public man, and the same authority may be able to mention a succeeding generation or two. But genealogists, paid for this work, are about the only ones who have the time to look up the

Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. A DOG'S LIFE
Estevo For, a Brazilian slave, made several attempts to escape prior to the Brazilian Emancipation Act of 1888. In accordance with custom he was muzzled by his owners in 1854 to mark him as a runaway, and the muzzle and collar were not removed for 34 years, until the Act of May, 1888, which made slavery forever illegal on Brazilian soil. He was then given a little plot of ground to cultivate and died in Rio de Janeiro in 1901 at the age of 67.

Hello! My Soul!

By DR. JOSEPH FORT NEWTON

MEN of science now tell us that the human brain is the most amazing telephone system ever heard of. It makes the "Tel-and-Tel" Company look like a toy-shop. They set down the figure one, then write naughts after it until we are dizzy, trying to show how many cross-roads nerve-fibers run to and fro in us.

If it is true—and it must be, because science says so—then a man ought to be able to hear from his own soul now and then. Or, maybe, he does not know the number, or somebody is asleep at the switchboard, or we get the wires crossed. Emerson told of a man who went to the postoffice every day expecting a letter. "Some day," said the seer, "he may hear from himself, and it will frighten him."

If one day we took down the receiver, and heard our own soul talking to us, how would it be? Most of us would be frightened half out of our wits, listening to that Dweller in the Innermost, telling us the truth. We would hang up quickly and take to our heels. Few of us take to hear to listen to that still, small voice calling to us to do what we know we ought to do. "Wrong number," we would say.

Oddly enough, our psychologists—some of them, at least—tell us that we have no souls. The telephone system is perfect, but there is nobody at the other end of the line. How strange; man has soul enough to find out that he has no soul. It would be disturbing if it were not so silly. Man a song without a tune, a stick with only one end!

No, soulless psychology is nonsense, to put it mildly. Man is a soul, in spite of himself. The great men—seers, saints, poets, prophets—are those who know the number of their own soul, and how to listen to it. Therefore, they lead us, save us, teach us.

Truly we are fearfully and wonderfully made, as the Bible tells us. "A nice chap, but it's a long time," we say, knowing, and what we say. What wonders are in the human soul, if we listen to it. Did not Jesus say, "The kingdom of God is within you?" O my soul, remember!

Ten articles, especially selected by Doctor Newton as being the most outstanding so far published in this series, have been reprinted in an attractive booklet.

This booklet will be sent without cost to interested readers. Requests should be addressed to Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

by P. HAL SIMS

And Now a Word for the Responding Hand

THE last few articles contained suggestions to guide you in deciding whether to pass or to bid doubtful hands of the defensive type in first and second position. I pointed out that there was danger especially when your partner's response was likely to be a bid of two in a lower-ranking suit, which you could not raise. Unless you are prepared to make the distinctly invitation al rebid of two no trumps, an opening bid is inadvisable except possibly as a pass with hands which call for a response on your part to keep the bidding open. If your partner is likely to get into your hands twice, give him a response, and let that response tell him where your strength is as far as you possibly can. However, when you have a choice between responding with a bid or with a pass, nothing is lost and much may be gained if you attach great importance to the length of your suit. I mean this:

(a) If you are a four-card suit, tend to bid a no trump rather than the suit unless your hand as a whole is fairly useful, or unless your distribution includes a single-tenace in the suit. If you are a five-card suit, tend to bid a no trump rather than the suit unless your hand as a whole is fairly useful, or unless your distribution includes a single-tenace in the suit.

(b) If your bidable lower-ranking suit is of five or more cards, bid the suit and not a no trump. Remember that if you are weak you are preparing your sign-off, so that it is important that your partner should know that you are not a five-carder when you bid it twice. If you bid a no trump first, then switch to your suit, he will read you for a four-card suit in a fair hand.

Avoid a Contract of Two No Trumps
Here as elsewhere the sign-off must not be in the two no trumps. The weaker the responding hand, provided it has a five-card suit, the more important that the sign-off be in that suit. If there is to be a sign-off short of game, it must be either at one no trump or in three of the responder's suit. We have been assuming that the opener's hand was of the defensive type. This means that he is almost certain to have at least two cards in the responder's suit. With seven trumps, these hands are almost invariably less of a misfit in hand of the suit than in two no trumps. It is up to the responding hand—the partner who has the five-card suit—to steer the sign-off back to his suit over a period of two no trumps by the opening bidder. If he lacks a five-card suit and his hand is weak, but not weak enough to pass the opening bid, then he should not have done anything to prevent the opener signing-off at one no trump.

(c) If the responder takes out in a suit, and the original bidder now bids two no trumps, the former should raise to three no trumps if his hand contains about two tricks in primary and secondary form. That is to say, if he expects Declarer to get into the hand twice, and if that is likely to be enough to clear and bring in the Dummy's suit. If he has a high card in the opener's suit—Q x or better—he should not have done anything to prevent the opener signing-off at one no trump.

(d) If the responder takes out in a suit, and the original bidder now bids two no trumps, the former should raise to three no trumps if his hand contains about two tricks in primary and secondary form. That is to say, if he expects Declarer to get into the hand twice, and if that is likely to be enough to clear and bring in the Dummy's suit. If he has a high card in the opener's suit—Q x or better—he should not have done anything to prevent the opener signing-off at one no trump.

(e) If the responder takes out in a suit, and the original bidder now bids two no trumps, the former should raise to three no trumps if his hand contains about two tricks in primary and secondary form. That is to say, if he expects Declarer to get into the hand twice, and if that is likely to be enough to clear and bring in the Dummy's suit. If he has a high card in the opener's suit—Q x or better—he should not have done anything to prevent the opener signing-off at one no trump.

(f) If the responder takes out in a suit, and the original bidder now bids two no trumps, the former should raise to three no trumps if his hand contains about two tricks in primary and secondary form. That is to say, if he expects Declarer to get into the hand twice, and if that is likely to be enough to clear and bring in the Dummy's suit. If he has a high card in the opener's suit—Q x or better—he should not have done anything to prevent the opener signing-off at one no trump.

(g) If the responder takes out in a suit, and the original bidder now bids two no trumps, the former should raise to three no trumps if his hand contains about two tricks in primary and secondary form. That is to say, if he expects Declarer to get into the hand twice, and if that is likely to be enough to clear and bring in the Dummy's suit. If he has a high card in the opener's suit—Q x or better—he should not have done anything to prevent the opener signing-off at one no trump.

Walter Winchell On Broadway

PORTRAIT OF A MAN TALKING TO HIMSELF.
The monotony of New York in the torrid spell is something to grieve about. . . . Perhaps I shouldn't have left it for the more exciting Hollywood scene—where for a New York item-collector, at any rate, the movie colony is exhilarating. . . . Though I know dozens of news-better downers out there who would swap routines with me—for expense coin. . . . Here in Manhattan, however, with the thermometer playing practical jokes, I am moody—mainly because the Broadway which so many of us hoped would be revived one day—now offers no indication whatever of doing so. . . . Instead, it has lost all flavor, glamour and sparkle. . . . And to make it seem more like the ghetto—the police permit the pushcart peddlers to clutter up the busiest Times Square corners—the harder to cross the street, my dear. . . . Yes, I miss the artificiality they have about them out there in the magic lantern belt. . . . Although to be honest about it—the population there now is chiefly made of former Broadway citizens, all struggling for whatever honors Hollywood has to offer—and clutching at each other's throat—just as they did in New York. . . . But is made for more excitement than can be found between the Battery and Yonkers—and I have wasted gallons of gas seeking a new shiver. . . . I take that back. Minor and dull the "Bolero" on the Morris Roof lifts the fux on your face.

They probably will murder "Lary Bones" as they did "Stormy Weather". . . . No radio or cafe routine, it appears, is complete without it. . . . The better version, however, is Mildred Bailey's—a hot plate. . . . It is so obvious that the radio executives use political talk as a time-filler, fashioned by the army of news-hunters out there. . . . I know dozens of news-better downers out there who would swap routines with me—for expense coin. . . . Here in Manhattan, however, with the thermometer playing practical jokes, I am moody—mainly because the Broadway which so many of us hoped would be revived one day—now offers no indication whatever of doing so. . . . Instead, it has lost all flavor, glamour and sparkle. . . . And to make it seem more like the ghetto—the police permit the pushcart peddlers to clutter up the busiest Times Square corners—the harder to cross the street, my dear. . . . Yes, I miss the artificiality they have about them out there in the magic lantern belt. . . . Although to be honest about it—the population there now is chiefly made of former Broadway citizens, all struggling for whatever honors Hollywood has to offer—and clutching at each other's throat—just as they did in New York. . . . But is made for more excitement than can be found between the Battery and Yonkers—and I have wasted gallons of gas seeking a new shiver. . . . I take that back. Minor and dull the "Bolero" on the Morris Roof lifts the fux on your face.

The only laugh I've had in a long spell was reading a windy piece on various Hollywood men and women, who, according to the writer of the article, were supremely happy. . . . The piece was intended to reveal that most of the news about the movie stars was so much gossip, fashioned by the army of news-hunters out there. . . . And of the several "happily married" couples, the author named some, who really are carrying on and suffering through it all—to avoid the dreaded California Community Law, which exacts half of the husband's or wife's fortune, no matter whose fault it is. . . . It made me laugh a little, I mean because the subjects themselves, as well as the writer, certainly will titter at the author's well meant, but inaccurate, observations.

No matter how poor the picture, Marie Dressler manages to survive the handicap of mediocrity. . . . The only actress with a soul. . . . Richard Barthelmess simply will not agree to any theme that might shock his admirers. . . . Or so they told me on the lot where he performs. . . . He probably knows best—he has profited greatly all these years with sentimentality—while so many others who began when he did—are playing "bits" today. . . . I still don't understand the cameramen remove the wrinkles and those valleys from under the eyes of so many women who were ingenious when Theda Bara was.

His name is George and he serves one of the newspapers from Police Headquarters down on Center Street. . . . For 30 years, it appears, George has flitted stories of murder, theft and arson—being responsible for many of the scoops in New York City—yet he never wrote a bit of copy in his career. . . . No time to write it. . . . George tells it to a re-write man via the phone. . . . There's an eye-flicking cover for any magazine in those colorful rowboats that are bunched in a circle in the lake near Central Park South. . . . I never knew until the other dawn why the fire chief gets to the scene later than the firemen. . . . Because, they told me, he takes time to dress or change his tie—while the men merely slide down the pole in their lingers. . . . I just can't get interested in going anywhere by plane. . . . Nobody can make me believe that flying a whole day and night to the Coast in your clothes is comfortable.

Those people who carry on campaigns opposing billboards which "ruin the natural scenery" would bungle for the sight of one of them between Kansas City and San Bernardino—on the Santa Fe route. . . . Nothing but wastelands and perhaps a corn field to give the orb an ache. . . . How embarrassing for the composer of "You Won't Be Sorry," the song. . . . When Sigmund Spaeth, "The Tune Detective," who traces all tunes—traced that theme to several other composers. . . . My idea of an intelligent number is "Cabin in the Pines," and the one song that teases my nerves is that silly lyric about "the river has a soul" and "fills my bowl."

Dear Mrs. Post:
I AM planning a tea for my year-old daughter, who graduated from junior school. First: Should there be receiving line, and in what should they stand, and how long? Second: We wish to invite all the teachers at my daughter has had since she started school. Some of them are married and their wives (or husbands) are perfect strangers to us. Should they be invited too?

Answer: First: Yes, stand in a line, and that etiquette requires you to cut everything with the fork. Is this really true? Answer: If you found yourself at a table set with only one knife you would necessarily have to use the meat, and do the best you could to cut whatever else there was a fork. Correctly, each place table should be set with what is necessary. For a fish menu, obviously no knife is necessary, for celery salad, no salad knife necessary unless cheese and crackers are served with it. But for fish with bones in it, there should be a fish knife, and for camembert cheese or for lettuce or any green leaf salad, a salad knife (with silver blade) is essential.

Dear Mrs. Post:
I had a lunch party the other day. As was the only one at table with me, I used my fork in the order found them: First a salad fork, then a dinner fork. The menu was chicken salad, apricot aspic, potato chips and so on. The dessert was lemon pie. The incident does bother me except that I would like to safeguard against committing the same error over again in case was wrong.

Answer: You are supposed to eat from the outside toward the plate. If the table is set improperly, it is no your fault. If you have a fork you have listed, I don't think made a particle of difference what implement was used. Personally, I think I should have saved the best fork (waiting in the next course) for the end have had to eat the pie with it. As a matter of fact, no rule of etiquette is of less importance than which fork we have to choose.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Why Do I Love You?

DON'T know Roy Croft. But Dorothy S. has sent me a little poem which I'm passing part of it along with my thanks to him. And presently you'll be clipping it, too, and sending it on again to someone else. For it's about that one thing which means most to all of us, does most for all of us.

LOVE.

I love you,
Not only for what you are,
But for what I am
When I am with you.

I love you,
Not only for what
You have made of yourself,
But for what
You are making of me.

I love you
For the part of me
That you bring out;
I love you
For putting your hand
Into my heaped-up heart
And passing over
All the foolish, weak things
That you can't help
Dimly seeing there,
And for making me
Into the light.

All the beautiful belongings
That no one else had found Quite far enough to find.

I love you because you Are helping me to make,
Of the lumber of my life,
Not a tavern
But a temple;

Out of the works
Of my every day,
Not a reproach
But a song.

I love you
Because you have done
More than any creed
Could have done.
To make me good,
And more than any fate
Could have done
To make me happy.
You have done it
Without a word,
Without a sign.
You have done it
By being yourself.

Perhaps that is what
Being a friend means,
After all.

ROY CROFT.

By being yourself—and believing in the good; ignoring secretly think you can be;
being that you are as honest as you want to be, and as clean as you can.

The whole lovely mystery
And if that mystery has opened just once in all life—if just one person has seen such tenderness and faith—then you are no matter what happens after; no matter what heartak or shame or poverty or disgrace you may know; if you have been touched by love like this, you can always be proud!
And you can always be proud!
Like I wonder, if we could all live on such faith? Not sermons, threats. Not criticisms or rebukes. Just FAITH? Would you, and help you, and lift you out of your gutter, if someone loved in YOU like that? Then would it do to the other fellow?

BLONDE TROUBLE

CHAPTER ONE.

IT WAS 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and the Elite beauty shop was crowded, but Connie had had her appointment for three days so she didn't have to wait. It might have been better, she thought as she went down the narrow, curtain-hung corridor to the last booth on the right, if she'd had to wait. Five minutes on the uncomfortable wicker sofa with a movie magazine in her hands and she probably would have changed her mind. She was remembering those bad, indecisive moments before she actually entered the shop.

Wednesday when she had called for an appointment she had been hilariously rebellious. Thursday the qualms began. Friday they grew worse. This morning they eased a bit, but when the time came to walk down Thirty-eighth street where the Elite was located, they returned with a vengeance.

Glady's booth was empty when she went in. A familiar booth because Connie had been in it dozens of times. The shelf below the mirror that Glady kept so tidy, the big leather chair with its two soft cretonne cushions; the pictures on the cream paneled walls, one of Glady's mother, one of her baby, and three of Greta Garbo in different poses. The little glass vase that hung under the pictures held two fresh pink rosebuds.

The girl took off her hat and ran her fingers through her shining, chestnut hair. Deliberately wheeling the chair around so it wouldn't face the mirror, she sat down, leaned her head against the back rest, closed her eyes and tried to relax. It was impossible.

From the next booth came the high, shrill laughter of a woman patron and the low, amused chuckle of the operator. Footsteps pattered up and down the corridor swiftly, and there was the whir of half a dozen dryers singing through the small shop.

It wasn't too late yet. She only had to tell Glady that she'd have a shampoo, finger wave, and arch; that she'd changed her mind. Glady might not know, anyway, what she was going to have. Half the time she didn't look at the charts on the appointment table.

MORE laughter from the next booth and another dryer turned on, grumbling loudly at first, and then settling down to a steady hum.

"What's this now? You aren't really serious?"
"Of course I am," Connie returned. Glady had looked at the chart.

"You've nice brown healthy hair, Connie Paige, and I can't see any reason why you want to be a blonde."

"I can." Firmly because at that moment Connie felt very sure of herself. All her doubts vanished. Glady's words, "nice brown healthy hair" brushed them away magically.

They were the words she had used herself when she looked into the mirror in the dressing room at the Ritchie building Wednesday noon. They and others, too, more scathing.

Nice, brown, healthy hair, inclined to curl naturally. It was the "nice" that rankled the most. "If I don't want to bleach it..." Glady protested.

"If you don't someone else will. I've decided, and I'm going through with it. My hair is going to be blond."

Frowning, Glady tied a white apron-like sheet around Connie's neck. Neither of them spoke while she was vehemently mixing up a paste, but Connie watched the blending eagerly. In the small booth the tones of the ammonia were very strong.

"Brassy, Hollywood blonde?" the operator asked shortly.
"Just blond, please."

"You're going to be sorry, Connie. In the first place you're too young to be bleaching your hair, and in the second you don't know what you're letting yourself in for. Blond hair is expensive to keep up. You'll have to have a touch-up every two weeks, and that'll be $2.00."

"I know." Glady stood over her, brush in hand. "Does it go on?"

"It goes on." And Connie closed her eyes. She wasn't going to open them until the whole operation was over and she was a blonde and utterly different.

THE solution nipped her scalp, and now and then burned fiercely. Glady wasn't being gentle. She was angry. Connie knew, and when Glady was angry she didn't hide her feelings.

"When did you get this big idea?" Connie kept her eyes valiantly closed. "Wednesday, a little while before I called the shop."

"I thought you were such a sensible girl, Connie. You always struck me that way before."

"That's the trouble. I always was a sensible girl until Wednesday noon. I've always done such sensible things. From now on... well, I don't know."

Glady looked at the long, curling, dark lashes that were resting on Connie's slightly flushed cheeks. They were the longest lashes she had ever seen. They looked almost artificial. Behind them were deep brown eyes, large eyes, sometimes solemn, but more often twinkling, merry.

Over the lashes and the hidden eyes were Connie's finely arched brows, tapering into thin lines at her temples. Her skin had a pale, glowing transparency unusual with brunettes. Under her full red mouth there was a firm chin. Glady glanced twice at the chin. It had the cafeteria in the building, a hurried lunch because there was usually a walk down the street later to the shops.

"I do... I do look different, don't I, Glady?" She couldn't take her eyes off the glass.

Sometimes buying a hat or a pair of shoes, a dress. More often not. A scurry to get back to the office by one, two after-noon, and from five o'clock on watching the clock for the magic moment of 5:30.

The subway with Beth beside her. They shopped on the dot. Beth went to the clothing store, they entered the flat on the fourth floor of the Irving apartments, started to get dinner. Promptly at seven they rose from the table and Beth went to the kitchen to wash the dishes, and if Beth were going out, Connie did them.

Even days didn't lend much variety. She went to the same places over and over, did the same things, danced with the same men.

SUNDAY, although there was no office to go to, had a definite routine of its own. Breakfast at 10, clothes to wash for the coming week, clothes to mend, a dozen things to keep her busy. Dinner out on Sundays at a little tea shop around the corner, where the menu never varied. Fried chicken, mashed potatoes, gravy and peas.

Monday the circle began once more. Saturday afternoons had no special variety because Saturday afternoons Connie usually spent at the Elite beauty shop having a finger wave or a manicure. There was no other time she could use for herself.

Some girls she knew who had elastic lunch hours went to beauty shops at noon, but the Ritchie Land and Improvement Co. gave its employees only one hour for a midday meal.

Three years at the Ritchie company, yet Connie felt in her heart that she was lucky to step right out of business college and into a job. Beth had found the job for her, and had paid also for her business course after she had completed high school.

She was fond of Beth, her only relative in the world after the death of her father, and Beth was fond of her. They never quarreled, but Beth wasn't like a mother. Connie had never known her mother, only her father, who had done his best to take the place of two parents to her.

The peroxide nipped again, and the girl winced. This bleaching business was taking longer than she expected. "Almost through!" "Almost," Glady answered.

"How does it look?"
"Rather good so far," was the grudging reply.

Still Connie didn't open her eyes. Her mind went back to Beth. In the 15 years her cousin had been working for the Ritchie company lant about it. She was hoping, as she skipped up the steps from the train, that Eth wouldn't be home; that she'd have some time to get acquainted with her new self.

THE two blocks to the Irving apartments seemed only a few steps tonight. Even the building itself wasn't so formidable, so old fashioned as she turned into the entrance and inquired at the desk for mail. There was none, and neither was Miss Lewis at home yet, the clerk told her. That was good. She'd have a few minutes to herself. Usually, Beth was home before Connie on Saturday afternoons.

In the elevator, the boy operator turned around and stared with unaccounted curiosity at her hair.

"You turning blond, Miss Paige?" It was more an exclamation of discovery than a question, but Connie answered.

"Yes, Elly. Don't you like it?"
"I think it's... great."

The car glided up to the fourth floor and Billy opened the door. "Lots of excitement just a few minutes ago, Miss Paige," he said proudly. "On my last trip up I took three policemen. Miss Putnam in 564 found a thief in her apartment when she came home."

"Miss Putnam?" Stella Putnam had the apartment directly above hers and Beth's and was one of her cousin's dearest and best friends.

"Yeh. But he got away..." Connie said. The policemen are hunting him. You're on the fire escape, aren't you?"

Connie nodded as she hurried out of the car. No. 464 with the and Beth occupied was on the fire escape, and she was trying to remember whether she had locked the bedroom window that looked out on this morning before she had left. That was her job, and she couldn't recall whether she had or not. She usually did.

A thief in Stella Putnam's apartment! No. 464 was at the end of the corridor and around a corner. Connie's fingers were trembling as she fumbled in her bag for the key. There was no need to be frightened, she told herself when it was finally in the lock and she was turning it swiftly. No need at all, because she surely had locked the window.

SOFTLY she opened the door, and peered in the living room. It was darkened as she and Beth had left it, so it would be cool and fresh for them when they came home. The blinds were all drawn evenly across.

Two of the windows were open a few inches from the bottom, but that was all right. They left them open in the summer. The living room didn't connect in any way with the fire escape. In fact, it was 20 feet away from it with the bath between the bedroom and living room.

Leaving the hall door open behind her, she went into the bedroom on the right. It was darkened, too, the blind pulled down. To be positive, she tried the window. Locked. She needn't have worried at all. Sighing with relief, she closed the front door. Miss Putnam's thief apparently hadn't come into 464. More than likely he had gone instead of down via the fire escape. There were four floors above 564.

What was that in the kitchenette? That sound like a chair scraping the floor? Nerves, Connie supposed. She was hearing things. Besides, there wasn't a chair in the kitchenette. It wasn't big enough to hold a chair. It might be the wind knocking something off the sink. But there was no wind.

Billy to be so frightened. There wasn't anything to be frightened about. There was no one in the apartment. Hadn't she tried the window off the fire escape and found it locked? That was the only way anyone could gain entrance to 464, for the one door gave into the living room. The kitchenette had no outside egress.

But to be sure... Connie was smiling as she ran across the room and opened the door into the kitchenette. The smile froze on her lips when she found herself staring at a young man with reddish hair who was standing by the cupboard.

THE PROMISE
CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS CROW had discovered Rip in the dog pound.

"I'll hurry back and tell Willy Nilly so you will be saved in time," the Crow cawed. "Rip urged. 'Oh, please hurry, Rip urged. 'I don't know what is going to happen to me. Some people are coming around to pick out a few of these dogs as pets, but I don't want to live anywhere else. And a number of the other dogs who haven't any homes will be painfully put out of the way so that their troubles will be over.'"

"But I want to live as I'm finding but a homeless dog. Only I don't want my home."

"There are some other dogs who will be claimed by their owners if their licenses are paid. Please hurry, hurry, I don't know what may happen."

"I won't waste another moment," cawed Christopher Columbus Crow, "but will fly in a straight line right back to Fuddle Muddle."

The dogs in the pound all told their life histories to one another. Rip had become a great favorite and they did hope that help would reach him before anything happened.

Christopher reached Fuddle Muddle cawing at the top of his Crow voice: "I have found Rip. He is in the dog pound, but if we're to get him out, we must pay for his license."

"There is no time to waste!" cried Willy Nilly, the little gnomelike man. And at once he hurried into his automobile Two-Ways and all the animals piled in too.

THE KENNEL MURDER CASE

By S. S. VAN DINE

CONCLUSION.

"DURING this tragic farce," Vance went on, "Wrede had arrived at a decision. He had decided to come back to Archer Coe and finish, for all time, the crime which apparently he had only started. He beheld himself of the Ting Yao vase he had broken, and perhaps fearing its absence would be noted, he picked out a superficially similar vase from his own small collection and carried it back to the Coe house. The hour, I should say, was around ten o'clock. . . . Wrede opened the gate of the rear yard, and left it ajar; and it was then that the Scottie followed him on his dark errand. He went in the rear door of the Coe house, leaving it open, and the Scottie followed. Everything was black and still. He went through the dining-room into the library, and placed his own inferior vase on the tea-wood base where the Ting Yao vase had stood. He took the dagger from the vase in which he had hidden it, and moved toward the hall. . . ."

Vance raised himself a little in his chair.

"When he reached the door, Markham, he saw a figure coming down the stairs from the second floor. There was a light in the library, but it was not sufficient to make possible an absolute recognition of the figure on the stairs. To Wrede that figure was Archer. Wrede stood behind the portieres at the library door, the dagger grasped in his hand, and waited till his opportunity came. The shadowy figure came down the stairs and walked toward the closet door at the end of the hall—Brisbane was no doubt going back for the overcoat and hat which he had left there on coming in. But Wrede, with his inflamed imagination, assumed that Archer was preparing to leave the house to tell someone of the attack—so he reported him to the police, perhaps he couldn't be sure, he only knew that it spelled danger for himself. And he was more thoroughly determined than ever to put an end to Archer. . . ."

"Brisbane, as I now see it, had just placed the strings, which he had used for bolting Archer's door, in the pocket of his topcoat, when Wrede came silently upon him from behind and thrust the dagger into his back. He collapsed, immediately, and Wrede pushed the body, which he thought was Archer's, entirely into the closet and closed the door. He went back to the library; and it was at this time that he probably stumbled over the Scottie, which had followed him. He decided that it was safest to get rid of her immediately. She may even have barked, or made some sound when he stumbled over her; and he was in no frame of mind at that moment to meet new emergencies logically. He dropped the dagger back into the vase and picked up the poker. Then he struck the Scottie, and he was in it was the simplest and most direct way of dealing with an unexpected circumstance when there was no time for thought. The presence of the dog was unexpected, incalculable. . . ."

"THERE can be little doubt that the man was in a panic and with sufficient reason. He did not even switch off the lights in the library. He went home through the rear door, thinking that he had left Archer's dead body in the closet. . . . Markham summoned him the following morning, he found that Archer was still in his bedroom, behind a bolted door. The man must have felt that the whole world had gone insane. I imagine he rushed to the hall closet, when Gambie was not looking, to check his sanity, so to speak; and then he saw the dead body of Brisbane. . . ."

"That was logical and in keeping with his character," said Vance. "Miss Lake explained it—intense jealousy of his lucky rival. Wrede thought he had successfully pulled the wool over our eyes. He knew exactly where the dagger was; he knew the domestic arrangements of the Coe house; he had a key to the rear door; and he doubtless knew of the broken lock on Grassie's door. He probably had brooded over his loss of a wealthy bride until he could no longer resist the urge to follow up his—as he thought—successful murder of Archer by the murder of Grassie. And had it not been for Lange's perspicacity—which Wrede underestimated—and the shift of Grassie's arm, he would have succeeded. . . ."

"But what," asked Markham, "first gave you the idea that Wrede had committed the murders?"

"The Scottie, Markham," answered Vance. "After having found she belonged to Higginbottom, I ascertained that he had given her to his innamorata who lived in the Belle Maison. And once I had followed the Scottie's trail and knew that she belonged next door, I made a bit of an investigation. I learned from a perfectly honest Irish maid that both Higginbottom and his lady fair—a Miss Delafield—had been having a farewell dinner at the time Coe was murdered. 'Yes,' I had thought perhaps that some blonde lady with a Duplaix lip stick had admitted the Scottie into the Coe house earlier in the evening. But although Miss Delafield used Duplaix lip stick and had undoubtedly called on Archer Coe before half past seven, it was not she who had let the Scottie in; for the little dog was in the Delafield apartment after 9 o'clock that night, and had disappeared some time between then and half past 10, at which hour the maid instituted a search for her. Moreover, I learned that the Scottie could have entered the Coe house only if someone had unlocked the gate between the Belle Maison and the vacant lot next to the Coe residence. And I further learned that there was no way for the Scottie to escape from the Belle Maison, except into the rear yard. Only someone who had unlocked the gate and opened the rear door of the Coe residence would have given her the opportunity of entering the house. And Wrede was the only person who could have done this. . . ."

THE following year Hilma Lake and Grand were married, and the alliance seems to have been highly successful. Vance became the owner of Miss MacTavish. He had become attached to her during the days he had nursed her back to health, and the romance (if one may call it that) between Higginbottom and Doris Delafield ran on the rocks shortly after the latter's return from Europe. After a break with the major she showed little interest in the dog; and Higginbottom, in appreciation of some reboult to love which he considered Vance had done him, made—she might have pointed me if friend husband himself hadn't been kept from any thought of vacationing in Europe by being handed "Balloon Boy," his own story at Radio, to direct. . . ."

Practical Fashions

Appear in Paris

PARIS.—Practical fashions for pocketbooks have made their debut at winter style shows in the midst of the luxurious mode launched by many dressmakers. Coats without a touch of fur, ensembles of green, blue and brown colors enlivened with brighter colors and evening frocks with detachable sleeves are offered as "fastidious fashions" without great cost.

Trim wool ensembles combining a slender skirt and a three-quarter length coat or hip jacket with a blouse of another hue lead the day-time practical parade. Most of them are untrimmed by fur, though a few have touches of some inexpensive flat felt.

One model, fashioned by the English designer Peggy Morris and named "Lobster American," combines a skirt and jacket of grayish brown wool with a lobster red wool blouse. Another called "September Morn" has a mauve wool skirt and jacket collared with moiré and a violet wool blouse.

The same designed displays fall and winter coats of black, dark green and mahogany brown, and gowns of the same fabric which fit closely about the throat. They are designed with a drooping "neck" shoulder line in contrast to the widened shoulders shown by many designers.

Evening gowns are constructed with detachable gowns which make them wearable for different occasions. One evening frock of soft gray velvet named "gray dawn" has detachable sleeves fastened to the square décolleté by copper clips which may be added when the wearer wants a dimmer gown. It is finished with an inch wide copper belt which snaps on like a necker. A black velvet evening frock cut with a cross strap back décolleté has a detachable upstanding shoulder collar of the same fabric.

THE lookers-on who have expected to see Gilbert Roland in all his pictures, are doomed for a little surprise. Darryl Zanuck, who concentrates on casting and doesn't make any mistakes, has borrowed Robert Montgomery from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the head man in "Moulin Rouge," the first picture La Bennett makes under her twentieth century contract. Connie told me at least five weeks ago that she was going to ask for Robert Montgomery for "Moulin Rouge" and it looks as if she had no trouble in getting what she wanted.

MAX BAER can now emote in his love scenes in "The Prize Fighter and the Lady," the lady has been located. After testing this actress and that one, Hunt Stromberg decided that Myrna Loy, who of the red hair and long list of vampish, exotic roles back of her, is the one. The role, according to Joseph McGillicuddy Sherman, a big Myrna singer and most exciting of all she has Max Baer make love to her. Max admits he is good both as a screen lover and a fighter and is something these days to believe in yourself.

FAY WRAY doesn't mind in the least being the screen love in Jack Holt's life but it has upset her plans. She and her writer-husband, John Monk Saunders, had made all arrangements for a European trip when Fay was called back to the Columbia studios to play the heroine in "Man of Steel." Bobby Miller, production with Lambert Hillyer directing, she might have pointed me if friend husband himself hadn't been kept from any thought of vacationing in Europe by being handed "Balloon Boy," his own story at Radio, to direct.

HATTER in Hollywood: We mentioned some weeks ago that Edward Sedgwick, well known director, was matronly minded. Since then a close friend of his whispered the good news that he and Ebbes Hayes, well known radio writer and popular in Hollywood film circles, will tell it to the minister in about a week's time. Mrs. Sedgwick has obtained a divorce in Reno and now lives in a small apartment in the city of Ebbes and his promised bride.

SOME of us are invited by Paramount to look at 29 tests of girls for Alice in "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland." Each test will be ticketed with a number. Three of the applicants who have interested the Paramount executive are Jill Handor, Elsie Dvorak and Ida Lupino. The Chicago girl was chosen by Queen Mary to play Alice at Windsor Castle. The Dvorak girl is playing Alice in the Enchanted Theater at World's Fair for Tony Sarg.

LINE or two: Tallulah Bankhead is one of the honored few who has enjoyed the friendship of Greta Garbo. Garbo and Teddy de Bernier called on the Bankhead before she returned East. Julie Lang, the girl with ideas at Paramount, and Dick Hunt, at one time a newspaper man and now in publicity, called for Honolulu where they were married. Their honeymoon will be enjoyed in the beautiful isle on the Pacific Ocean. The Skeets Gallagher's infant daughter, Pam, will be christened Sunday. Mrs. Rita Kaufman and Bebe Daniels have been selected as godmothers, while William K. Howard is the godfather. A tea at the Gallagher home will be given for the christening. Prepare to meet a new Healy stooge. Ted was out driving and stopped at a lion farm to see a month-old Leo. Speaking of Ted Healy, he has signed a new contract with M-G-M.

SNAPSOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Lila Lee celebrated the termination of her engagement to George Hill by lunching at the Wine Street Derby with Johnny Farrow. Lila had steadfastly refused to see Johnny while she was engaged. Evelyn Knapp and Don Cook, two others who have parted, reunited at the luncheon table at Al Levy's tavern. Joan Crawford, with a few minutes to spare from the studios, lunching at the Beverly Derby with Frank T. Stone, Vina Delmar, the young star and the husband doing the big outdoor act at Lake Arrowhead. Winnie Lightner spending much of her time rowing on the lake at Arrowhead. Richard Dix has taken himself to Arrowhead Springs to take the baths and drink the far-famed waters. William Garman, one of the four who rates a Honolulu trip with the Odeon de Mille company. He has signed for "Four Frightened People." Constance Cummings and the bridegroom, Benn Levy, entertaining guests at their home.

CONValescent Serum THE younger child is the greater the hazard when it develops any of the so-called childhood diseases. Measles, for example, which is usually a mild condition in the older child, is likely to become a serious disease in the infant.

Because many of the childhood diseases are most contagious before they become apparent in the sufferer, it is usually rather difficult to protect children against becoming exposed to them.

Science therefore has sought for a method to combat the extra hazard of childhood diseases in young children and infants. Such an effective weapon has, in a measure, been found in the use of convalescent serum, or, when this is not available, the whole blood of the parents or of other adults.

One such serum is made by taking a small quantity of the blood of a patient recovering from measles and clearing it of the red blood cells and other cellular elements.

Whole blood taken from adults has also been employed in the treatment of measles, chickenpox, mumps and whooping-cough. While less effective than convalescent serum, whole blood also proved of value in the first three diseases.

In whooping-cough the results were not as prominent. However, both convalescent serum and adult blood modifies, that is, renders less severe the course of the whooping-cough in an appreciable number of cases.

THE new feather boas and capes almost take your breath away. A little girl will become a grand dame when she gets dressed up with a daisy of ostrich tips or wraps a flutter of coquettish feathers about her throat. There are capes of the one and stoiles of the other, some designed for afternoons and others too elaborate to venture out until after dark—but more of these feather fashions, anon.

Some of the new collars resemble the old-fashioned dickies which the fashionists once used to make a low-cut frock look respectable. There's one, for example, of black satin lined throughout with white. An upstanding piece buttons like a monk's collar while a white silk cord goes back and forth across one front, eventually ending in a loosely tied bow.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

by WYNN

For Tuesday, Aug. 23.
ET ready for a big September. The boy and girl who look ahead are going to be better off than the majority of others. Today, don't test your popularity—go along the family groove. Clear the deck for future action.

Urns in the First House—From now till March, 1933, you will continue to be a big intellectual influence on those in April 3 to 28, inclusive. The mode of thinking, remembering, and imagining are all undergoing alterations that will color the future these folks for the rest of their lives; so it is well to pay attention to what is going on in the subconscious realm. External changes are apt to be the reflections of the shifts within—move ahead with the vibrations that resist them unwisely. Friends are apt to come into life at this time; they should be cultivated if worthy, for this period for you that you will be back on as a turning point; weigh carefully all who enter your affairs. Watch finances, particularly those of occupation or business.

Your Year Ahead.
Ups and downs in the coming 12 months for folks who celebrate this anniversary. Make use of former possibilities Sept. 23 to Oct. 7, and May 17 to Aug. 6, 1934; and the latter Dec. 13 to May 22, April 17 to June 10. The first period especially good for financial activity on your part. Last "do" period, avoid legal tangles. Dan. Jan. 31-Feb. 11; June 4-10, 1934.

Tomorrow.
Can be made a very good day if it constructively—plan as for it, now.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1.—It will unless all theories of evolution by survival of the fittest are wrong. Science is now saving millions of babies who formerly would have died from inherent weakness, along with many others who are strong but who formerly died merely from lack of care. On the whole, however, preserving the weaklings and permitting them to produce more weaklings tends to lower the general average. Dr. Floet in Germany, Pearson in England and Snow in Australia have adduced statistical evidence that this has actually

It doesn't seem right to jail that fellow who distributed tear gas in the stock exchange. For years brokers have been making statements that turned out to be nothing more and nothing less than tear gas.

FEARLESS JOURNALISM
(Alfred, Wash. News.)
The party who stole our laundry off our front porch while we were away on a vacation certainly had their nerve. It consisted of a green shirt, a pair of underwear, bed sheet and pillow slip. They not only had their nerve, but probably needed it worse than we do. They were seen taking it and are known. Before issuing a search warrant, we have this to say: We go to bed about 10:30 each night. If we do not find our laundry on the porch, some morning before next Monday, things are going to happen. This police should be sufficient.

We are just hanging by our eyebrows and then some fellow comes along and steals all our clothes. What would you do?

But dictators for this and dictators for that. Shouldn't we wear and tear on what's under our hat.

"The depression may not have taught us much," observes Genevieve, the kitchen cynic, "but it certainly offered an advanced course in what the secrets of success used to be."

And George Gumperson writes us that: "A gal who'd better live in fear keeps murr'ing 'How's about it, dear?'"

And the big trouble seems to be that people with personalities haven't anything to say, and those without personalities haven't got the floor.

POL. 85. NO. 358.

ROOSEVELT LIFTS BAN ON SALE OF NEWLY-MINED
GOLD ABROAD

Also Orders Coin and Paper Held by Individuals Registered Within 15 Days Under Severe Penalty.

DIRECTS LATTER TO GIVE REASONS

In Two Executive Orders Puts Into Hands of Secretary of Treasury Power to Control Sales and Holdings of Metal.

The Associated Press.
HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt today lifted the gold embargo to permit sales of newly-mined gold abroad and at the same time tightened the restrictions against gold holding. The two executive orders were issued suddenly today by the President just as he departed for an automobile tour upstate.

The decrees put in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury full authority to license all gold sales abroad and all holdings of gold in the country.

Within 15 days every person holding "gold coin, gold bullion, or gold certificates" is required to file a statement with the Government of the amount in excess of $100. Within 30 days all holdings above that amount are prohibited.

Opens Foreign Markets.
The raising of the embargo, so as to allow the sale of new-mined gold abroad opens the higher priced foreign markets to American producers. This permission has been earnestly sought for several weeks.

The President acted under careful examination of the gold embargo regulations by Attorney-General Cummings so as to make sure that the new law would not affect the gold supply of this country.

It is understood that Secretary of Treasury Woodin already has arranged for the establishment of machinery to put the new rule into effect.

Sales of the new-mined gold will be made only through the Secretary of the Treasury and under license.

License for Use of Gold.
The new anti-holding regulations replace the existing orders and permit the Secretary of the Treasury to license the use of gold in all foreign transactions, and the withdrawal of any gold from banks within the country.

The returns required for an accounting of gold held by individuals are required for the collection of Internal Revenue.

A license is required for the acquisition of any gold by any person or corporation except a Federal Reserve Bank.

After 30 days no person is allowed to hold any gold coin, gold bullion or gold certificates.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue such regulations as necessary to enforce the rigid decrees.

Penalties of a $10,000 fine and 10 years imprisonment are sanctioned under the order.

$100,000 in Gold a Month Smuggled Into Canada, It Is Said.
PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Bootleggers are buying up old gold and smuggling it into Canada in such quantities that the gold refining industry of the nation is threatened with ruin, it was charged today by Ross M. Barrett, head of a gold refining company here.

One syndicate in this section is doing a business of $1,000,000 a month, Barrett charged in a letter sent to the Committee for the Study of the Gold Problem at the Philadelphia mint.

The bootleggers purchase old gold at prices ranging as high as $100 an ounce more than the price paid at the United States mint, and smuggle the metal into Canada where it is sold for almost $20 an ounce or about $8 more than can be obtained in the United States.

The text of the President's order on sale and holding of gold is printed on Page 1-C.
